Intellect misses the point

It was heartening to hear this month the attack on the government's plans to tax satellite broadcasters – known as Recognised Spectrum Access – by Intellect, the electronics industry lobbying group.

Intellect is afraid that RSA could jeopardise the government's own plans to make use of an orbital slot the UK holds at 33.5°W, which Intellect says could be used for expanding the range of broadband-by-satellite services on offer to rural communities.

Satellite broadband is expensive in comparison with ADSL or cable, especially for two-way, high-capacity services, so we should support the call. But Intellect has missed a crucial point; all but a small fraction of satellite dishes in the UK point at the 28°E slot used by Sky Digital, and most of those which point elsewhere are aimed at 19.2°E for Astra 1 or 13°E for Hot Bird.

The simple lesson is that if you want to launch a satellite which will be useful to British consumers and businesses, it needs to be in the Eastern sky. If it's somewhere between 15°E and 35°E, users can make a simple modification to their Sky dish to receive both signals without needing two dishes.

Satellites orbiting at around 30°W are mostly used for the Americas, Africa, and Transatlantic news feeds. Indeed, the slot would probably be very attractive to Astra, Eutelsat, or any other satellite operator.

If the government, Ofcom or Intellect wants to make use of our orbital resources – and there's a time limit on taking them up – they should lease the position to a satellite operator and use the revenue to subsidise broadband-via-satellite for businesses and residents in rural areas.

As well as being more convenient, it will be a lot less expensive or risky than building and launching our own communications satellite.

Make Dolby Digital a Sky standard

Testing the £95 free-to-air satellite receiver from Mondeal this month, we couldn't help noticing that it supports Dolby Digital. The licences and hardware for this technology are now so cheap that it's standard on almost every budget satellite receiver and DVD player. Many Freeview adapters support it and no one on Freeview even broadcasts in Dolby Digital.

So how come it's only available to Sky subscribers through Sky Plus? Here at What Satellite & Digital TV we love the twin-tuner hard disc recording system. It's a product which genuinely lives up to the hype and changes the way you watch TV, and in many ways digital audio is the least of its features.

It's about time Sky gave viewers a treat and built Dolby Digital into the specification for the standard Digibox, which now looks pretty dull by satellite standards ■

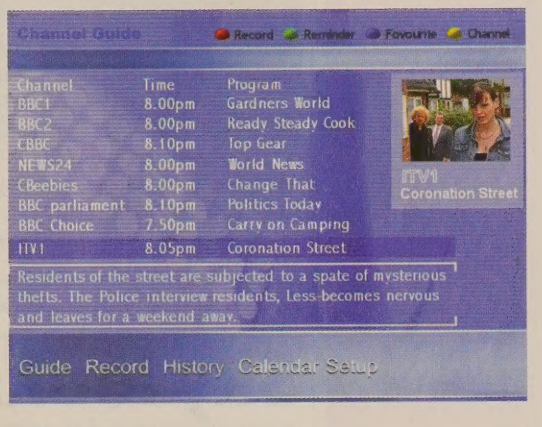
First seven-day Freeview guide arrives

ONE MILLION ADAPTERS COULD MISS OUT ON LISTINGS



Around a million Freeview homes can now tune into a seven-day programme guide from commercial provider 4TV.

Fastguide is available on Freeview adapters from Thomson, Fusion and Bush, as well as all adapters featuring the latest version of Setpal software.

Viewers can pick up the seven-day guide by tuning into channel 704, and the information is updated every day at around 3.15AM.

It's available instantly and will be supported by advertising and other interactive features, but cannot be updated for last-minute changes.

Fastguide transmits on a separate Freeview channel, unlike the BBC-backed prototype open-standard guide, which has started a new wave of public trials.

Freeview plans to launch this guide this spring.

So far only Pace has guaranteed to upgrade all of its adapters to support it, although Nokia and Sony will attempt to upgrade their software.

Freeview's guide will transmit a constant stream of information on all six multiplexes, carrying seven days of information for all channels.

However, it could take up to 10 minutes to load the full information, so Freeview is hoping eventually to replace the guide with a faster version based on MHEG-5 interactive software.

Industry standards body, the Digital Television Group, believes that up to half a million Freeview adapters will not be able to use the Freeview EPG because they lack memory or the manufacturer won't upgrade the software.

Another half-a-million Freeview homes are watching on old ITV Digital boxes, which can't be upgraded to support the Freeview EPG.

■ New TV regulator Ofcom is looking for opinions on a code of conduct for EPG providers.

Ofcom wants to ensure programme guides give fair access to all channels, and 'appropriate prominence' to the public service channels BBC, ITV1, Channel 4 and Five.

All guides should carry information about subtitling, audio description and signing for hearing- or sight-impaired viewers.

Sky has been singled out for a need to ensure access to satellite channels on fair terms whether or not they're part of a Sky subscription package.

Comments can be e-mailed to Peter Bourton on peter.bourton@ofcom.org.uk, or via post at Ofcom, Riverside House, 2A Southwark Bridge Road, London SE1 9HA.

A six-in-one official CAM

Turbosat has launched a licensed CAM which supports Irdeto, Conax, and includes four months of access to four hardcore adult channels.

The Ulti-mate CAM is officially licensed by Irdeto and Conax, and includes the latest versions of both encryption formats.

It also includes four-month subscriptions to the hardcore adult channels Sexview, Sexview Plus, Don't Panic TV and 247-Sex TV.

All four channels are found on the Hot Bird satellite at 13°E, and the card retails for £119.

Fake Seca2 pirate cards on sale

Pirate card users are being warned about fraudsters who claim to have cracked Mediaguard's Seca2 encryption.

The cards are being advertised on internet forums for around Euro140, but customers who have tried to buy the cards have only received a letter warning they could be reported as a pirate card owner.

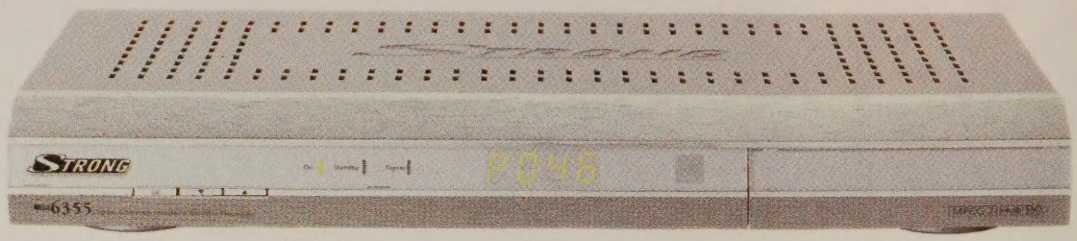
Mediaguard introduced the Seca2 encryption format two years ago after the original Seca was comprehensively hacked.

Seca pirate cards were widely available, and piracy was a major factor in the downfall of ITV Digital, which used the system.

Encryption experts do not believe any hackers have yet cracked Seca2, although it is a high priority for the piracy community.

IN BRIEF

- TCM has encrypted after four years as the UK's only free-to-air satellite film channel, and viewers must now subscribe to the £19.50 Family Pack. The move may be to allow launch of a German version of TCM on Astra 1, or due to the exorbitant EPG access charges Sky levies on FTA channels
- Eutelsat has delayed the operational launch of its E-bird satellite because of problems with the antennas covering Poland and Germany. The craft has several spot-beams for supplying broadband services to the UK and northern Europe, and has now been in orbital 'testing' for more than two months
- Setanta has delayed the launch of its Freeview sports channel, which would have carried UEFA Cup and Scottish Premier League football, plus Irish and US sports. Setanta reportedly wants more premium content before the channel launches
- The European Union has agreed to change signals from the Galileo sat-nav system to prevent interference with America's military GPS signals. EU and US officials hope to hammer out America's remaining issues with the highly accurate civilian system in negotiations this year
- Sky hopes to show a Euro-wide lottery on Friday nights this spring, with a potential jackpot of £35million. The Euro Millions competition, being organised by Camelot, would be part of a weekly live entertainment show, with the lottery to be played in Britain, France and Spain at launch
- Star TV and Star News have been added to Sky Digital's Family Package. Sky's sister channels from India were previously available only as extra premium channels on Sky Digital



Three Strong contenders

Multi-function remote controls and interchangeable fascias are just two of the features on Strong's new line of slim satellite receivers.

Top of the range is the £125 SRT6355, which has a twin common interface, and over 4,000-channel memory and is pre-programmed with transponders for 64 satellites.

The SRT6355 has a 5-in-1 universal remote control, and connections include an S-video output, twin Scarts and optical digital audio.

There's also an external IR sensor for users who want to keep their satellite receiver out of sight, and it is preset with channels for Astra 1 and Hot Bird.

The free-to-air £105 SRT6155 has identical features, but lacks the common interface slots, while budget users can try the SRT6125 at £88.

This has the same 256-colour menus with picture-in-graphic, but no S-video, external IR sensor, universal remote, or UHF loopthrough.

All three models can be customised with interchangeable colour fascias and support four favourite channel lists.

Strong, 0131 625 1030, www.strongsat.com

Sky looks into TV habits

About 20,000 satellite viewers will give Sky a detailed look at their viewing habits with Sky Plus and extra Digiboxes.

The new survey system will make viewing measurements four times more accurate than the current BARB system, which monitors 5,000 homes only.

Sky hopes it will supply accurate figures for smaller channels which often barely register with the existing system.

The new survey will also be able to measure the effects of a second Sky Digibox or a Sky Plus on people's viewing habits.

Viewers will be given incentives to opt into the scheme, similar to the vouchers offered to BARB panel members.

Star treatment for Freeview

Technisat has adapted its Skystar range of PC adapters for Freeview with the Airstar PCI card and USB adapter.

Both products support all Freeview channels and DVB EPG, with full personal video recording functions.

Technisat claims the tuners have a high sensitivity tuner that will pick up all channels in fringe areas.

The Airstar PCI retails for £69 and the Airstar USB is priced at £129, with a remote control extra for the PCI at £19.

Creative Labs has made its first move into the portable media player market with the Creative Zen Portable Media Center.

One of the first portable devices to feature Microsoft's Media Center software for multimedia playback, the Zen will have a 20GB hard drive.

Larger capacity models are expected to be made available, but the initial model will store up to 87 hours of video (including TV programmes), 300 hours of music, or 50,000 pictures.

The Zen is compatible with any version of Windows XP and a future update of Windows Media Player will add a Smart Sync option to enable easy transfer of files from a PC using the device's USB 2.0 connection.

The device has a 3.8in LCD screen and supported file formats are Windows Media video, Windows media audio, Windows Media image, MP3s, and JPEG and tiff image files.

The Zen Portable Media Center is expected to appear in the United Kingdom in late 2004.

Creative Labs, 0118 934 4322, www.europe.creative.com

Pay-TV plan for digital terrestrial

Sky One, E4 and up to eight other pay-TV channels could be available on digital terrestrial TV as early as April.

Top-Up TV hopes to launch the service to homes using former ITV Digital equipment, charging around £8 to £10 a month.

The company hopes to recruit E4, Sky One, TCM, Cartoon Network, UK Gold, Discovery and others to its mini-package.

The service could need as little as 300,000 subscribers to break even, but would have to overcome several technical hurdles.

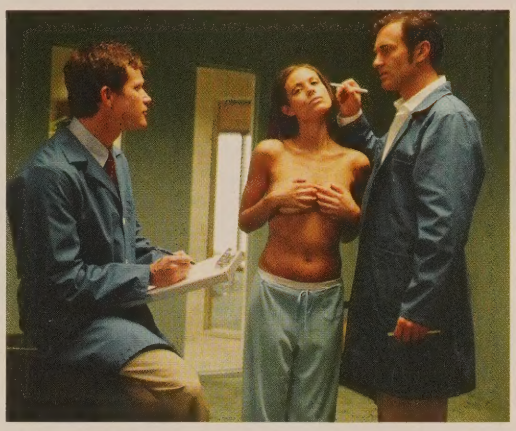
Up to 1.25 million homes have old ITV Digital boxes and IDTVs, but the Mediaguard Seca1 conditional access system used by ITV Digital was completely broken by hackers.

Hundreds of thousands of pirate cards, available for next to nothing, were a major factor in the collapse of ITV Digital.

The pay-TV channels would have to be broadcast on DTT multiplexes 1 and A, because the Freeview and BBC multiplexes are licensed to show free-to-air channels only.

However, there's only enough capacity on both muxes for four channels at most, so to broadcast 10 channels they would have to be broadcast at very low quality.

Most Freeview adapters can't be used for pay-TV – only the Pace Free-to-view, Pace Twin and Netgem i-Player can be upgraded.



Happy together

Hassle-free recording of Freeview channels is one of the benefits of the new combined Freeview adapter and VCR from Daewoo.

The SV900 incorporates a six-head Nicam VCR with Videoplus support, which can also record subtitles, digital teletext and interactive services. The adapter portion uses the Setpal software and features a seven day-ready EPG that can also be used to schedule recordings with a single button press. Connections include two Scart sockets. The SV900 is available now priced £160.

Fortec's Platinum promise

American receiver manufacturer Fortec has brought a range of new free-to-air and pay-TV receivers to the UK.

The FS Platinum has a twin common interface and memory for 4,800 channels, with DiSEqC 1.2 motor control.

The FS One World adds a built-in Irdeto CAM to the Platinum's features, while the FS Super World has a built-in Conax CAM and memory for 3,000 channels.

Magic World Plus adds a UCAS CAM, memory for 3,000 channels, and a built-in 36V positioner, plus USALS compatibility for its DiSEqC positioner.

All four receivers also have optical digital audio outputs with Dolby Digital support, and twin Scarts with composite video.

There's also a personal video recorder, the FS 5200 PVR, which has a 40GB hard disc, DiSEqC 1.2 and memory for 4,000 channels.

Euro1080 sets a date

Hi-def TV channel Euro1080 has announced it will be encrypted from May 1.

The channel had been due to encrypt from launch, but has put back the date until receivers with Irdeto 2 encryption are widely available in Europe.

It shows a variety of classical, pop and rock music at almost twice the resolution of existing digital TV channels, with Dolby Digital surround sound.

Viewing cards will be available from www.euro1080.tv for a one-off fee of about £100, and should operate for at least five years.

Euro1080 broadcasts on Astra 1, 19.2°E, at 12.536GHz/V (SR 27500, FEC 3/4) and can be picked up free-to-air with a hi-def capable receiver or a fast PC with a satellite receiver card.

The only receiver currently available is Quali-TV's ZDX-410HD, but Euro1080 hopes to have big-name manufacturers like Humax and Panasonic involved soon.

IN BRIEF

- Eutelsat's Atlantic Bird 1 satellite, orbiting at 12.5°W, has been suffering periodic outages, switching itself into emergency 'safe' mode , which requires a ground-based re-authorisation and instructions to operate normally
- SES-Global offshoot Worldsat has commissioned a new satellite, Worldsat 3, for Transpacific communications. It will join Worldsat's fleet (20 Ku-band transponders and 18 C-band transponders) in 2005
- RTL has launched four Austrian channels on Astra 1 in FTA digital. RTL, RTL 2, Super RTL and Vox are special versions of its German channels, and can be found on 19.2°E at 12.226GHz/H (SR 27500, FEC 3/4)
- Horse racing channel Attheraces could go off-air this spring after scrapping a deal with 29 UK race courses. Sky, Channel 4 and Arena Leisure tore up the deal due to poor interactive betting returns, and a regulatory decision that said the collective detail may have been unlawful. The channel will now sign up race courses individually
- Tivo is suing Echostar for infringing patents it holds on using a personal video recorder to record one programme while watching another, watching a programme while it's recording, pause live TV, and so-called 'Trick Play' features. The 'Time Warp' patent is one of more than 49 granted to the company, which has 100 more applications pending
- Find out what's going on in Rome with Roma Channel on Hot Bird at 13°E. The FTA channel has chat shows and news on arts and culture in the city, films, and its own soap – all on 11.137GHz/H (SR 27500, FEC 3/4)

IN BRIEF

- The Wrestling Channel will launch as a standalone free-to-air venture in March on Sky Digital. The channel has been testing on Friendly TV since December, and will run at least eight hours a day when it goes solo, including a weekly news show, special guests, competitions and fan phone-ins
- ITV has promised to launch spin-off channel ITV3 by the end of this year, but hasn't decided if it will be free-to-air or subscription. It will be aimed at an older audience than ITV2, with nights or weekends dedicated to popular drama series like Prime Suspect, or showing new episodes a week early like E4 and Channel 4
- Sky is building a state-or-the-art emergency back-up centre in Hampshire in case its Osterley headquarters is damaged by an environmental disaster or attack by terrorists. Although it's outside central London, Sky HQ is on the flight path to Heathrow, and the new playout centre is also being offered to other channels as a back-up
- ITV and Channel 4 digital terrestrial broadcasts from the Rowridge transmitter in southern England may be improved when Multiplex 2 switches from channel 52 to channel 28. Mux operator NTL has yet to confirm a date for the change, but the move is understood to be imminent
- Fox Kids will begin showing 'Jetix' programme blocks from April, to prepare for renaming the channel in the autumn. The move is part of a worldwide rebranding of Fox Kids channels in Jetix, a children's action and adventure channel

Optic verve from JVC

Black is clearly the new silver in TV land with the latest plasma screens from JVC sporting a striking black frame.

The PD-42V31 (£4,000) has a 42in screen with a WVGA resolution of 480 x 853 and a contrast ratio of 3000:1 and incorporates JVC's DIST picture processing technology to deliver a more detailed picture.

It has a built-in 36W Nicam stereo sound system, an analogue tuner and picture-in-picture and picture-and-picture options.

A table-top stand is provided and the TV can also be wall-mounted. Connections include three Scarts, component video inputs and a headphone input.

JVC's next generation of plasma sets will be the first to include its cable-free optical wireless transmission system.

This laser-based 'opti-link' system uses a sender connected in an external tuner box and a receiver positioned on top of the TV and is capable of transmitting uncompressed video up to high-definition quality.

The new system will be included with the 42in PD-42Z50 and 50in PD-50ZO plasma screens which are set to appear in the autumn.

Britain's satellite plan threatened

The UK's communications regulator is hoping to connect remote communities to broadband with a new satellite.

Ofcom wants to take advantage of an orbital slot Britain holds at 33.5°W to attract private sector partners for the project.

It must supply firm plans to use the frequencies within months, or hand them back to the International Telecommunications Union, which regulates space communications.

However, high-tech industry group Intellect has warned that the government's plans to raise money from satellite communications could put off investors.

Broadcasters and broadband internet providers supplying services to the UK could be charged under the Recognised Spectrum Access scheme.

Ofcom would have to both organise support for the 33.5°W slot and collect RSA fees from its users.

What Satellite & Digital TV has also noticed that 33.5°W is 60 degrees west of the position used by most British dishes, and could conflict with satellites at 31.5°W and 34.5°W.

Just the facts

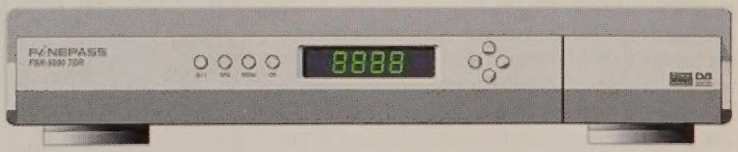
Information TV is a new Sky Digital channel carrying programmes from government departments, public bodies and other public service institutions.

Located at channel 692, the free-to-air channel will also be available soon on digital cable, and as a part-time channel on Freeview later this year.

It covers topics such as starting a business, personal health, community work, careers advice and training, your rights, jobs in local government, and regional government news.

There's a website at www.information.tv, and non-Sky satellite viewers can find Information TV on Eurobird, 28.5°E, at 11.623GHz/H (SR27500, FEC 2/3).

Handan's double offer



Digital satellite viewers now have another twin-tuner personal video recorder to watch and record on at once.

The Handan FSR-5000 TDR is sold PVR-ready for hard drives of up to 120GB, from Seagate, Maxtor or WDC.

It has memory for up to 6,000 channels, on 1,300 transponders across 100 satellites, with a twin common interface.

The receiver has two independent tuners, plus DiSEqC 1.2 motor control with USALS auto-location.

There's a USB port, which can be used to control the receiver from a PC, and to transfer video and audio files for editing.

Outputs include twin Scarts with RGB support on the TV output, composite video, coaxial digital audio with Dolby Digital support and analogue stereo audio.

Showcenter brings fun together

Films, music and pictures on your PC can now be brought to your TV via Pinnacle's Showcenter.

The slimline box connects to both wires and wireless networks to find media files on PCs with Windows XP and Windows 2000.

The Showcenter connects to your TV or display using an RGB Scart, composite, video or component video, and to your audio system using analogue or digital audio outputs.

You can create favourites lists and organise your media files using the remote control, or even instruct your PC to burn CDs and DVDs.

It supports MPEG1, MPEG2 and DiVX video files, WAV, MP3 and WMA music formats, and a wide range of picture formats.

The £200 device also has a second set of analogue audio outputs for enabling audio in two rooms.

Satellite TV on the move

The first compact in-car satellite antenna capable of TV reception was unveiled at this year's CES show in Las Vegas.

Delphi's antenna fits inside the roof of an ordinary car, but can track changes in both horizontal bearing and elevation as a car moves.

The product is said to involve significant advances in vehicle attitude sensing to compensate for the constant roll and pitch of a moving vehicle.

The electronics are also able to discriminate between different satellites automatically, and Delphi claims the mechanical parts aren't audible above normal road noise.

The developers also had to come up with flat LNBs and focusing elements which would fit into the space between a car's roof and interior headliner.

The demonstration car used multiple LCD screens with cordless headsets to deliver satellite TV, DVD and video games to passengers.

Delphi believes the system will be commercially available in America within a few years, and says there are no obstacles to the technology working in Europe.

Ratings round-up

Barb has long been the source for ratings info, but recent audience tallies for the BBC's digital channels have caused concern at the corporation. Research drawn from Barb figures for 2003 revealed that more than 55 days' worth of channels on BBC Three et al recorded zero on the ratings scale. These included the now-axed Liquid News and website spin-off Celebdaq on BBC Three, the Talk Show on BBC Four and screenings of Will Young and Gareth Gates on tour on CBBC.

The Beeb was quick to reply that its rivals ITV2, Sky One and Sky Sports also regularly hit the less-than-coveted zero mark and that the story had been circulated by a rival broadcaster.

But it has not all been doom and gloom for the BBC's digital bouquet. A surprise hit has been the series based on The Alan Clark Diaries, starring John Hurt. The series debuted on BBC Four with an impressive audience of 848,000 viewers, making it the most-watched show in the channel's history and, at the time, the third most-watched channel in multichannel homes behind ITV1 and BBC One.

Elsewhere, the relaunched Sky Movies also scored big with its Free View teaser showing of About A Boy and staggered showings of the pay-per-view Star Wars: Episode II - Attack Of The Clones, bubbling under the top 20 with a respectable November highpoint of 810,000 viewers. As Sky's promise to start showing Box Office films sooner after their video release is finally paying off, it seems the threat of DVD may be postponed.

As news reaches Footprint that the German version of Big Brother is to extend its run to a year and America is planning another Temptation Island-style show on an island that could potentially last forever, the question must be how to keep the whole reality TV thing interesting? Putting aside accusations of locking stable doors after the horse has bolted, the answer may lie in the 'eccentric' minds of Channel 4 producers. In a move that immediately brings to mind Alan Partridge's desperate programme pitch for monkey tennis, Big Brother originator Endemol has been talking to Channel 4 about, wait for it – Monkey Big Brother. Apeing the flogged-to-death Big Brother format, the series would be based on the belief that monkeys have distinct personalities and are capable of performing tasks and voting each other out. Insert your own joke about 'monkeys'; 'typewriters' and 'naff reality show ideas' here.

■ If there's one guaranteed driver of technological advancement in the entertainment industry then it's the adult movie business. The only industry to fully exploit the countless trick-play features available on DVD players (or so Footprint has been informed by a man down the pub) has now turned its attention to hi-definition television, with Playboy and the Spice channel starting have begun transmitting pay-per-view hi-def movies on US Sky equivalent Direct TV in early February. However, as Playboy TV president Jim English recently told TV Predictions.com, there are fears that the pin-sharp picture quality generated by hi-def could mean the results are more akin to an episode of Nip/Tuck than an, er, titillating celebration of participants' ready-made assets. 'HDTV is perfect for National Geographic and the National Football League, where you don't expect people to be pretty. But adult films are about the close-up. With surgeries and implants, I don't know if you want to see everything in HDTV.' He could have a point.

■ In the great tradition of kicking something when it's down, one internet wag has created a website called '101 Reasons Why ITV Sucks'. Targets singled out for amusing ridicule include ITV2 ('Have you ever watched anything on it except Die Hard 3?) and GMTV ('A bunch of Daily Mail readers laughing about nothing').

■ After the 'Will he? Won't he?' confusion that led up to Tony Blair's eventual needn't-have-bothered appearance in The Simpsons (even producer Al Jean denied it was going to happen at one point) comes rumours that David Brent from The Office is to make an appearance with the residents of Springfield. The Ricky Gervais creation should make a great foil for Homer as they compete to see who is the most insensitive lunk. Let's hope that, unlike Tony, Brent gets more than 10 seconds of screen time ■

The secrets behind satellite broadband

BARRY FOX PRIES INTO THE DIGITAL TV INDUSTRY EVERY MONTH IN WHAT SATELLITE & DIGITAL TV

Astra has been playing with the idea of broadband by satellite for at least five years. A full-blown 'symmetrical' system uses two-way communication, down from the satellite to home or office dish in Ku-band and up from the dish to the satellite in Ka-band. Astra 1K, built by Alcatel, had two-way capability but the rocket failed to get it into orbit.

So Astra is going back to basics with an 'asymmetrical' system that downloads to a home or office dish from the Astra 2 slot in the Ku-band and gets its upload and back-channel control commands by ordinary phone line modem. The system is a joint venture with AVC Europe.

It's an appealing idea for anyone who can't get broadband by phone line or cable. Although some electricity supply companies are testing broadband over power lines, the technology is iffy because the power cables leak radio waves that can interfere with short, medium and long wave reception: civilian, military and for aircraft. 3G cellphone broadband is expensive and slow.

I hope to try an AVC system in late January, but here are a few reasons why it's so clever.

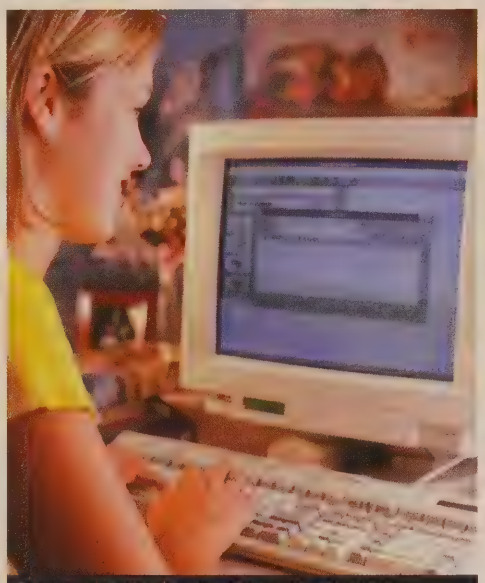
The Astra/AVC Net service works by directing all internet traffic from the user through the existing ISP to a proxy server in Luxembourg, which then squirts high-speed data over the satellite. Because AOL uses proprietary software it will not work. So the subscriber will need a different ISP, such as Tiscali or Freeserve.

'DATA SENT BY THE SATELLITE HAS TO BE ENCRYPTED SO THAT ONLY THE INTENDED SUBSCRIBER GETS IT'

The satellite is at Sky's 28°E slot, so an existing Sky dish will work. So will a Sky Plus quad LNB with spare feed. But there is still an installation charge of £250, regardless of whether the customer needs a new dish or not. AVC says this is because some existing installations are old, have been blown off-axis and are using long runs of decaying cable. It is safer to add a new dish and give a year's guarantee.

And, of course, Astra needs to keep Sky sweet by avoiding direct reference to the use of an existing Sky dish or Sky Plus installation!

Although conventional phone modems promise 56kb/s speeds, this is for the downstream channel only. The Internet Service Provider can make direct digital connections to the digital phone system and bypass lossy analogue/digital converters. A PC modem has to make an analogue connection and the extra analogue/digital conversion stages limit the upload speed of a 56kb/s modem to 33.6kb/s.



One-way satellite is a simple broadband solution for remote areas

The internet was developed by the military to maintain communications after a nuclear strike. Data is sent by any route available using the Transmission Control Protocol. TCP breaks down large files into small packets of data. The computer sending the data looks for acknowledgements (ACKs) of safe receipt, and re-sends packets that are lost because they have gone down bad routes. When too many packets are lost, the transmission rate is effectively halved for a while, so data rate slows.

So if Astra/AVC Net is sending back the control acknowledgements at only 33.6kb/s, how can it deliver the claimed download speed 'in excess of 512kb/s'? The net system does not use the customary TCP method of controlling data flow. It uses a system called Multicast, developed for broadcasting internet info simultaneously to a large group of people. Research into reliable multicasting goes on, but the current favoured control system is called NACKs (Negative ACKnowledgment packets) and this is what Astra/AVC use.

The transmitter sends everything to everyone, and individual receivers send back a NACK signal when they have failed to receive a string of packets. The transmitter then starts labelling data packets so that they can be sent only to the receiver that sent a NACK. This targeted receiver then has to send back an ordinary, positive TCP ACKnowledgement for each data packet successfully received. If the ACKs come back loud and clear, the transmitter moves on to the next receiver that was having trouble. If no ACKS come back, the transmitter tries a few more times and gives up, assuming the receiver is broken, or out of range. The data sent by the satellite has to be encrypted so that only the intended subscriber gets it, as every receiver is able to pick up everything sent. A hacker would need access to both the satellite and telephone paths simultaneously, which is near-impossible.

The only downside to the satellite system is that, even with NACK control, the PC has to stay connected to the phone line all the time it is downloading from the satellite or the server gets no NACKS or ACKS and gives the receiver up as a lost cause. So whereas an ordinary ADSL broadband system does not interfere with ordinary phone calls, the satellite system hogs the line, blocking ordinary phone calls and costing money. The saving grace is that at 512kb/s large files move fast.

One possibility is to use a cellphone for the return path. This is possible because the Astra/AVC service enhances the existing service, and doesn't replace it. The user's existing analogue modem remains connected to the PC in the same way; the USB receiver connects to the dish, the PC and the power supply, with connection to the modem handled by the PC not the USB device. So if the customer has his PC connected to a mobile phone or GPRS device for internet access he can continue to use it.

Normally, the phone line and satellite are sharing the data load. But the system can be set to stop the mobile phone receiving data. The mobile just sends commands. So it is cheaper to use if the mobile connection is GPRS, which charges by data traffic, not time on line. But using an ordinary GSM phone with modem will be expensive because data calls are charged by time, like speech calls ■

2004 it's a big TV year

ALL THAT'S NEW IN THE SKIES ABOVE THE US AND FROM THE NETWORKS ON THE GROUND IS REPORTED EVERY MONTH BY CHRIS FORRESTER

You might think that a TV year is much like any other, with four seasons and 52 weeks. But you'd be wrong. Because as regular as clockwork, every fourth year is a mega-year for television, especially in the US. And 2004 is such a year. Indeed, experts suggest that it might be bigger than ever. The main reasons for this are the Olympic Games in Athens (August 13-29), and the American presidential elections. Both events are responsible for generating vast amounts of television traffic.

The only other experience – excepting tragedies like September 11 – that comes close is the FIFA-sponsored soccer World Cup. But the tournament, important as it is, tends to miss the US. For the US as well as the rest of the world, the Olympic swimming, rowing and other track and field events will have almost every viewer on the planet glued to their TVs.

The US presidential elections are already under way, given that the first primary elections took place back on January 19, building up to a climax in November. It is fair to say that the election is going to be of interest to American viewers primarily, but 2004 is the first time that British viewers can follow total coverage of the election build-up, from the razzmatazz of the two main party's annual conventions, right up to election night. Fox News will carry all of these elements live. Sky News can also be relied upon to deliver plenty of highlights. There's also CNN International and BBC News 24. But Fox will have the coverage edge (though don't forget that the station is regularly criticised for its right-wing bias).

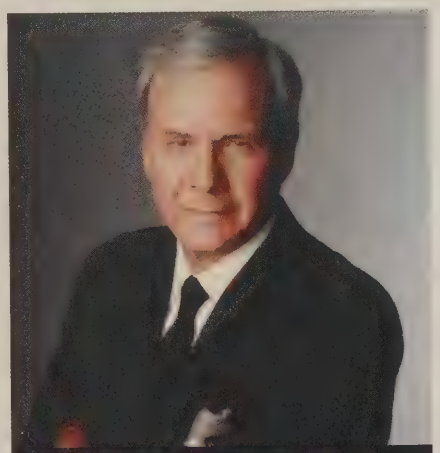
ANCHORS AWEIGH

But 2004's exceptional television year will also affect American viewers in an unusual way. This year is expected to see a series of regime changes on the news shows.

Don Hewitt, executive producer of CBS's top Sunday night news magazine show 60 Minutes, is retiring. Hewitt has been on air since the first episode of the show back in 1968. He's 80, and while it's fair to say he has been taking a back seat of late, it is still an enviable track record. Hewitt doesn't sever his links with CBS completely, and has signed a new 10-year development contract with CBS. 'I want to die at my desk,' he says.



End of an era: NBC's Brokaw steps down

NBC's senior news anchor Tom Brokaw, another TV institution, is also stepping down. He says he'll go after the presidential elections. Of course, at 63, Brokaw is a child compared with Hewitt, having started his TV career in 1982 and the sole anchor of the NBC Nightly News since 1983. He will remain connected to the news desk but is stepping away from the nightly obligation.

The two moves have prompted speculation about American TV's other 'grand old man' of news, Dan Rather. Rather is another CBS key news anchor and, at 72, he is reportedly talking to CBS about extending his contract through to 2006. But he might go.

You might think that in this age of multi-channel TV, and the dozens of news sources now available to viewers, network news would be less important. Not so. Although it is fair to say that numbers for newscasts have dwindled (from about 75 per cent of the audience 25 years ago, to about 55 per cent of viewers today) this is still a huge number of viewers. On a typical evening around 30million Americans still tune to either Brokaw, Rather or ABC's Peter Jennings (65) for their news fix. The assorted CNN services, or Fox or msNBC news channels can barely muster a million between them. But the fact is that much of this loyal audience is growing older with the network's news troika. People over 65 are twice as likely to watch an evening newscast as those under 30, according to the Pew Research Center. Those under 30 have never been big consumers of TV news. As people grow up, marry and have families, only then do they become more interested in things that affect them and watch more news.

This decline in news ratings is not dissuading some of networks to launch extra niche channels. NBC already backs financial channel CNBC and all-news msNBC. But Fox News CEO Roger Ailes says his channel might launch a financial news spin-off channel. Part of the reason for this is News Corporation's ownership of satellite platform DirecTV. It seems that boss Rupert Murdoch sees his own financial news channel as a useful addition to DirecTV's existing 500 or so channels.

But there's one other tiny change scheduled for 2004 that could herald a massive alteration in how TV success is calculated. Viewing patterns are measured by passive 'People Meters' hooked into a select number of homes, and determine network ratings. In use since 1987, these are to be changed in favour of a local, more sophisticated measurement system. Los Angeles (naturally) will get them first about now, then New York, Chicago and San Francisco later this year. It means that measurement company Nielsen will be able to give a complete and accurate analysis of what a major region watched the night before by breakfast the following day. Technically, this could make the long-established four-times-a-year 'Sweeps' system obsolete overnight. Television could change forever, and the industry is quaking in its boots.

TETRA televisual terror!

Has your terrestrial TV picture suddenly deteriorated? Martin Pipe reports on the likely cause, and what you can do about it

Over the past few years, terrestrial analogue TV reception in homes around the country has been increasingly spoilt by ghosting – 'multiple images' – as property developers, spurred on by commercial and residential building prices that have been spiralling out of control, put up as many buildings as possible on their plots of land.

Degraded TV reception is traditionally one of the areas given the least of all thought by developers. In the late 1980s, for example, East London residents discovered that their TV pictures were gradually becoming unwatchable through ghosting. By amazing coincidence, the massive Canary Wharf development was taking shape nearby.

So what was going on? Ghosting (also known as multipath 'reception') is caused when buildings – which may be some distance away – provide one or more reflected paths to signals from the transmitter. Because they take indirect paths, these signals are received by the affected user's aerial slightly later than the (wanted) signal that arrive directly from the aerial. As a result, they appear to the right of the picture.

The distance between the wanted and the ghost images depends on the time taken for the indirectly reflected signals to arrive, and the obtrusiveness of the ghosts depends on their strength relative to the wanted signal. If the viewer gets his pictures from an indirectly reflected signal – which in some cases may be stronger than the directly received one – ghosts may instead be seen to the left of the picture.

Fifteen years may have passed since Canary Wharf started causing so much consternation among locals, but the lack of government/local authority intervention means that developers are under no legal obligation to fix the mess they have caused by installing communal aerials, relay stations and so on. Those affected have to put up with poorer pictures, install a more directional aerial that picks up less of the unwanted signals, switch to cable or 'go digital'.

Readers of this magazine will know that satellite TV has never suffered from ghosting, and those lucky enough to be in a position to receive it will know that terrestrial digital is remarkably resilient to the problem. Any property developers that are aware of the ghosting issue are, no doubt, looking forward to the analogue shutdown as much as the government (which is set to cash in on the frequency sell-off).

No amplifier no interference noticed

The amplifier inherent TETRA's interference

Small TETRA handsets give emergency services reliable and co-ordinated communications

TROUBLE ON THE HORIZON

But there's a new terrestrial TV problem on the block – and it's one that, if my experience is anything to go by, affects both digital and analogue reception. A few months ago, I noted that TV reception at home here in the South-East had suddenly deteriorated beyond belief. Ghosts on the analogue broadcasts had gradually increased over the five years I had been living in the house, owing mainly to the erection of more tall buildings, but pictures from some channels (notably Channel 4) were now completely unwatchable. In addition to fuzzy vertical columns were random washes of herringbone patterning.

More worryingly, digital reception was less reliable than it had been. Even the BBC channels, which are carried via the more robust QAM16 multiplexes, occasionally broke up into a blizzard of artefacts. Various items of electronic equipment around the house were turned off, just in case one was at the root of the interference. Every single one proved blameless.

Then, at last, came a breakthrough discovery! Like many others in the UK, I use a distribution amplifier to feed multiple TVs from the one amplifier. When this was disconnected, and the aerial fed to one of the TVs directly, the interference all but disappeared.

Maxview's TETRA fitters could solve your problems

Believing the fault to be in the distribution amplifier, another unit was substituted. Unfortunately, the problem remained. Indeed, it was discovered that even the basic aerial amplifier built into a video recorder or digital set-top box would ruin analogue TV reception if left 'in circuit'.

'SURELY THE GOVERNMENT WOULDN'T SPEND BILLIONS OF PUBLIC MONEY ON A SYSTEM WITHOUT ENSURING THAT IT DIDN'T INTERFERE WITH EXISTING RADIO-SPECTRUM USERS?'

Could some powerful out-of-band radio signal, like a poorly aligned pirate radio transmitter, be 'swamping' the distribution amplifier? This could cause a phenomenon called 'cross-modulation', which can result in interference very similar to that experienced. I rang up the local branch of the Radio Investigation Service (RIS), which dealt with queries like these. The officer revealed that there had been no recent complaints regarding pirate radio stations in the area. He did, however, admit that some fellow residents had been experiencing identical forms of interference to mine, but not from anything illegal. Far from it, in fact. In these cases, the source of the interference was TETRA (TErrestrial Trunk RAdio), a new digital radio communications system designed for use by the police and other emergency services.

TETRA, known in the UK as 'Airwave', is a European standard that offers many advantages relative over the old analogue communication systems. It's far more secure, and as a result criminals won't be able to eavesdrop on police conversations. In addition, TETRA will make it easier for police to talk to other emergency services – saving time and possibly lives. Not that it's restricted to talk; a big advantage of TETRA is that computer data (such as photographs of suspects, database searches and maps) can also easily be sent over the network. But surely the government wouldn't spend billions of public money on a system without ensuring that it didn't interfere with existing radio-spectrum users?

SPECTRUM SPLATTER

Unfortunately, this would appear to be the case. In addition, we also discovered some news reports describing how some early users of TETRA (including North Yorkshire Police) had been complaining of headaches and other ailments. A study by the National Radiological Protection Board, however, concluded that '...the signals from TETRA' are 'unlikely' to pose a hazard to health. Humans, maybe. But what cannot be disputed is that these signals do pose a hazard to the health of TV reception.

Coincidentally, the local police had switched over to TETRA at about the same time my TV picture had taken a turn for the worse. TETRA is one of the government's 'pet' PFI (Private Finance Initiative) projects, and in charge of the roll-out of the system is a company called O² Airwave – a subsidiary of the mobile network formerly known as BT Cellnet. Airwave's Motorola-manufactured base stations, of which there will be approximately 3,000 by the time the network is complete in 2005, are – where practical – being installed alongside the cellular base stations that carry O²'s mobile phone calls. I live in a large town, and there is one of these cellular base stations nearby. On this particular base station's radio tower can be seen the new flat-panel TETRA aerials. The Radiocommunications Agency – since absorbed into Ofcom – is responsible for spectrum planning in the UK. Document RA419, downloaded from the RA's website when it was still live, revealed that TETRA/Airwave is using frequencies (380 to 385MHz, and 390 to 395MHz) that are close to the lower part of the UHF TV broadcast band (470 to 860MHz).

If serious TV interference is a problem, a frequent public port of call is the RIS – which, like the RA, is now part of Ofcom. The relevant phone numbers are available on a form that can be downloaded from the Ofcom website (see box 1). You can arrange for the RIS to visit, but you will be charged £50 if the interference can be traced to your equipment.

Unfortunately, most distribution amplifiers found in homes are 'untuned', and susceptible to this kind of problem. By the RIS's definition, then, your equipment is as much to blame as would be a poorly designed TV or unsatisfactory aerial installation. In the unlikely event that a TETRA transmitter turned out to be at fault – in other words, it was radiating out-of-band signals – you would be refunded.

For your £50, the RIS officer will fit a bandpass filter that will 'reject' the TETRA signals responsible for troubling your amplifier, and your TV picture should clean up considerably. These bandpass filters, which sell for about £10 apiece to the trade, would be installed between between the aerial and the distribution amplifier.

But in the real world, things aren't as easy as that. Aerial amplifiers of a different kind are also commonplace in areas of low signal strength – they 'boost' the weak signal. To ensure that it has the best possible signal to start with, this 'masthead' amplifier is mounted adjacent to the aerial. The coaxial cable linking the two is thus kept as short as possible, and so 'attentuation losses' are minimised where they count. The masthead amplifier's output is fed, via a longer cable run, to the viewer's TV. Because it has been amplified, the losses here aren't as critical.

DO IT YOURSELF

Replacing this difficult-to-get-at black box, or installing a masthead filter between it and the aerial, is a professional job. But there's more. If the TETRA base station is nearby, additional 'braid-breaker' filters may have to be installed. In addition, the entire run of co-ax might need to be replaced by the special 'double-screened' variety normally associated with satellite TV.

RIS officers do not have the authority to do carry out such involved work, and so the customer will have to pay a rigger to do it. Customers who spent considerable amounts of money in recent months to have a new aerial erected, before the (unpublicised) move to TETRA, so they could receive the Freeview channels are unlikely to be impressed. If you're in this unfortunate situation, we would recommend employing the services of an aerial contractor which belongs to the CAI (Confederation of Aerial Industries).

Theoretically, though, many customers without masthead amplifiers should be able to effect a DIY cure by buying a filter and inserting it between the aerial feed and the indoor equipment. But can you purchase such filters in high street stores like Dixons and Maplin?

The answer is, of course, no (Maplin does sell a 'TVI' filter, but it's designed to reject 27MHz CB transmissions and is of little use here). They appear to be only available to trade customers and bodies like the RIS. I have contacted two reputable aerial equipment manufacturers, and neither makes such a 'self-install' device.

One of these manufacturers, Maxview, is well-known in the high street. It produces a range of weatherproofed filters designed for professional masthead fitting. These filters, like your TV aerial, are 'grouped' to match the channels carrying your TV broadcasts – something that was originally done to avoid TV transmitters interfering with those in adjacent regions. There are six of these groups (A/red, UHF channels 21-37; B/yellow, 35-53; C-D/green, 48-68; E/brown, 35-68; K/grey, 21-48; wideband/W/black, 21-68) and so you must choose the filter that's relevant for the channels you receive. We have tried these filters, and they do appear to solve the problem.

Maxview, on my recommendation, designed some simple-to-fit 'in-line' versions that could wind up in high street hardware stores and electronics retailers. It even arranged for prototypes to be sent to me for evaluation, but these were sadly lost in transit.

Had it done its job properly, the government would have ensured that such filters were widely available before rolling out TETRA. But should we be surprised?

The government's recent record on TV is reception is shameful. It screwed up badly on the Solus satellite viewing-card front at a time when we're all supposed to be going digital (Wotsat passim), while the Communications Act – practically guarantees that a powerful élite will end up controlling much of the British media ■

Dish maintenance

It would be nice to think that a satellite dish, once installed, would last forever with never a moment's thought. But like the building it's attached to, and the cars, washing machines, and other equipment in our lives, it takes a little looking after Spare a thought for your satellite antenna. It may not look a complex piece of engineering but it's actually doing a pretty difficult job; carefully gathering feeble microwave signals from a minuscule spot in the heavens, amplifying and processing them, switching between different groups of signals on command, and feeding them down to your receiver.

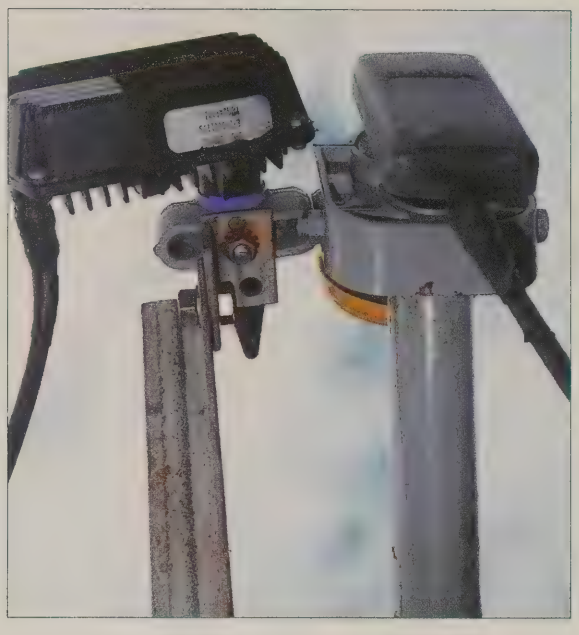
And it's doing all this 24 hours a day, every day, in all temperatures and weathers. It's a wonder that we get any TV through the thing at all!

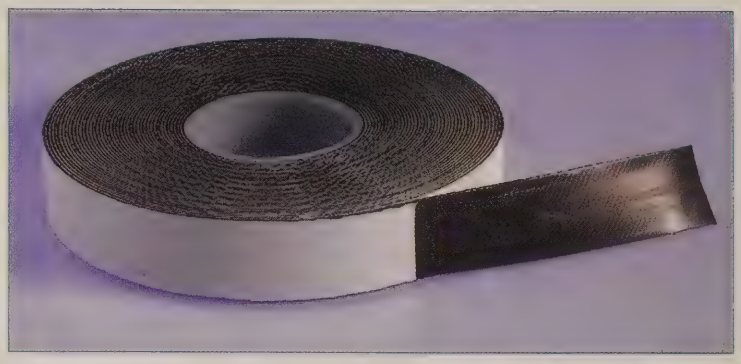
To make sure that you do continue to receive satellite TV, you need to spend a little quality time with your dish, LNB and cable to make sure it is kept in good condition and prepared for the worst that the British weather can throw at it.

But first, a word of warning. Most dishes in the UK are mounted on house walls, high above the ground and so you will need to inspect the dish, and to work on it using a ladder or scaffold tower. This is a potential recipe for disaster! Every year in the UK, around 50,000 people attend hospital Accident & Emergency departments following an accident using a ladder. Some 50 people a year die using ladders. It cannot be stressed too much that you have to be careful doing any work at a height.

Make sure your ladder is in usable condition, the right height for the work, at the right angle – and secured. Don't work alone; a helper at the bottom of the ladder is essential (but don't ever work with two on the same ladder). If you have, or can borrow or hire, a scaffold tower, so much the better. Although these are still sources of danger, they cause proportionately fewer accidents than ladders.



LNB cable seals may need replacing, and old LNBs could be changed for better and newer models



Self-amalgamating tape is ideal for outdoor weather-proofing

You should first give the whole dish and mount a good clean. With warm soapy water, wipe off the accumulated grime, cobwebs, bird lime, and so on, that bedecks your once-gleaming antenna. Now check that all the nuts and bolts are tight. Do not over-tighten them and stress the mount or the reflector, but make sure that they have not loosened in the buffeting of the wind.

WATER-PROOFING

Next, you should check the condition of all the waterproofing parts. The seal on the LNB should be perfect or water will get in and soon worsen its performance (and more likely, destroy it altogether). Note that some more recent LNBs consist of a metal shell, sealed against the elements, contained within a plastic casing that is there mostly for looks and makes no attempt to keep water away from the 'real' casing inside – so don't be dismayed by an apparently leaky LNB that's actually doing just fine under the skin.

'THE SEAL ON THE LNB SHOULD BE PERFECT OR WATER WILL GET IN AND SOON WORSEN ITS PERFORMANCE'

The LNB's connection to the cable is a favourite spot for water ingress. Many installers these days use a rubber 'boot' on the cable and slipped over the F-connector to keep out water. Although this is quick and easy for the installer, it doesn't provide effective and long-lasting protection. Over time, the rubber tends to perish or lose its springiness, and leaks.

Check that the boots give a good seal on both the LNB connector and the cable. If in any doubt (and preferably, whatever your thoughts), remove the boot and use self-amalgamating tape instead (available from most dealers/installers). A few inches of this rubber tape is wound around the joint, while being stretched as long as it will go. It sticks to itself and in time forms a solid and close-fitting seal around the joint that lasts for longer than the LNB is likely to.

Don't use caulking or silicone sealant on the cable connection; it's almost impossible to get an effective seal and it doesn't weather well.

If you find that the seal has gone on the cable connection and water has got in, the LNB may be OK but the cable almost certainly won't be. When water gets into a coaxial cable it can travel a great distance along it, in the air space between the two conductors, changing the properties of the overall cable and corroding its parts. This can produce all manner of strange transient reception faults.

The only cure is to replace the entire cable. That's not too expensive, but it can be difficult to do physically – especially if the cable is not simply clipped to the outside of the wall. This alone is reason enough to regularly inspect all the outside parts of the system.

While you're paying attention to the cable, check its entry point into the building. The hole in the wall will probably have been filled with mastic – check that this is still filling the hole and keeping water out.

CHECK YOUR LNB & STRUCTURE

Back up the ladder, attending to the dish, you may want to replace the LNB, depending on its age, even if it is working. All LNBs degrade quite considerably in normal use – their gain goes down and their noise figures go up.

For most satellite systems, well within the footprint, this probably won't matter until it reaches an extreme.

However, if you fitted a super-low noise LNB to your motorised dish to hunt down every last hint of a signal across the heavens, you may find you're not getting the results you once did. You will also probably find that an equivalent replacement today costs a fraction of what you paid a few years back.

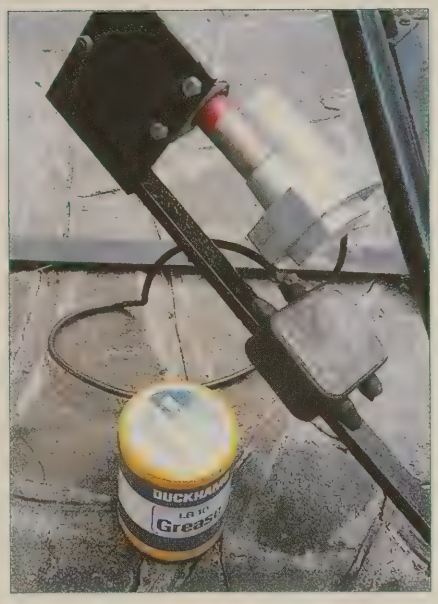
You should next inspect the structure of the dish and its mount. Look for parts that have obviously failed or worn. The dish and mount will usually be made of several different materials – metals and plastics – that age and weather in different ways.

Some plastic parts become brittle after prolonged exposure to sunlight. Any plastic parts that show signs of excessive fading or of cracking should be inspected carefully to see if they require replacement or repair (although the latter's usually difficult).

Fortunately, failing plastic usually applies most to largely aesthetic covers and cowls rather than to vital structural parts. The only maintenance a plastic, resin or fibreglass reflector is likely to need is replacement if it gets broken.

A wire brush will help you to remove rust

Hammerite provides one-touch rust-proofing for metal parts



Grease is the best way to protect moving parts

PAINT & RUST

Steel dish parts are usually painted or galvanised. Neither is fool-proof, and paint in particular will flake off after a few years (in some cases, a few weeks!), allowing the exposed metal to rust. This is not good and should be treated immediately. Quite apart from raising the potential of the dish or mount literally falling apart, rust will wash off in the rain and stain walls and patios beneath.

Paint missing from the reflector's surface won't affect the dish's performance (the paint is transparent to the microwave signals; it is the metal underneath that does the reflecting) but in time the surface will be broken up or even destroyed by further rusting, so this should be treated.

'A WIRE BRUSH CUP ON A POWER DRILL OR ANGLE GRINDER IS EXCELLENT FOR REMOVING RUST BUT IT'S NOT REALLY ADVISABLE AT THE TOP OF A LADDER'

Certain parts of dishes and their mounts are particularly prone to rust – where a bolt contacts a surface, the action of tightening it often breaks the paint layer; joints can suffer from weld corrosion; and the perforations on a 'mesh' dish present a myriad sharp corners which paint (dipped or sprayed on to the metal) often does not adequately cover.

Treating rusting steel dish parts is not unlike treating the same problem on a car body – but without the need for that 'showroom finish'. Pick and peel off all easily removable paint lifted by the rust and, using a blunt knife, file, or similar, remove more paint from around the edges until you reach clean metal. Then scrape away as much rusted metal as possible with a wire brush, file or sandpaper.

A wire brush cup on a power drill or angle grinder is excellent for removing rust but it's not really advisable at the top of a ladder.

When as much rusted metal as possible is removed, treat the whole area with a rust converter/preventer and then paint with a suitable primer, undercoat and topcoat. Car spray paints are suitable for dishes and mounts (and come in a wide range of colours so you can even camouflage your dish at the same time) but avoid over-spray getting on the building.

Alternatively, Finnigan's Hammerite paints provide good weather protection and can be brushed directly on bare metal.

If removing the rusted metal leaves great holes in the fabric of the mount or dish, don't bother to treat and paint the problem, and certainly don't patch it up with body filler as you would a car – it's time to replace that part or the whole dish. Obviously, large holes in the reflector will seriously compromise the dish's performance but any weakening of the mount should be taken seriously too. You don't want the whole dish coming down in the next strong wind.

GREASE THE GUBBINS

Don't paint over fixings such as bolts. This rarely provides a proper seal against moisture and just provides more nooks and crannies to hold water.

Instead, ensure that any existing rust is removed and smear a generous quantity of grease over all exposed metal parts (any standard grease for mechanical bearings will do). This keeps all water out but allows the fixing to be released easily if required.

Also, don't paint over the moving joints of a motorised mount. Make sure they're clean and lubricated.

Aluminium and aluminium alloy parts will not rust but the bare metal will oxidise and can easily seize when exposed to the weather. An aluminium reflector does not have to be repainted if the coating flakes off (except for aesthetic reasons) and nor do aluminium mount spars and plates, but fixings should be coated with grease like steel ones, to enable disassembly at a later date.

When the whole antenna has been cleaned, tightened, de-rusted, painted and generally given its yearly service, it's not a bad idea to check the alignment – even if you think it's OK.

With a fixed dish, you can use the receiver's onscreen display (enlist some help to relay the results) and gently pull in turn on the top, bottom, left and right edges of the reflector. If the level increases when the dish is pulled in any direction, then it was not well aligned and you should connect up a meter at the dish and do the job properly.

With a motorised dish, you can perform the same operation with the dish focused on a satellite at each end and the middle of the visible portion of the satellite arc.

If the alignment is fine then you've finished. Your antenna still won't last forever, but it's now got a much better chance of lasting for another 12 months ■

YOU WILL NEED

- A ladder or scaffold tower
- Self-amalgamating tape
- Spanners and screwdrivers
- A sharp knife
- A wire brush, file and sandpaper
- Car primer, undercoat and topcoat, or Hammerite
- Grease
- A couple of dry and sunny days!

A satellite signal meter will help you to fine-tune your dish alignment

@SAT SM3D12 MOTORISED MOUNT & 95CM DISH

COULD THIS BE THE UK'S EASIEST-TO-INSTALL MOTORISED DISH?

MARTIN PIPE CHECKS OUT A DiSEqC MOUNT AND 95CM DISH FROM @SAT

Last month, we tested @Sat's 9500 receivers and declared them interesting – particularly the 'Plus' version that can be upgraded to PVR by adding a hard disk. @Sat also sell a mount and dish for use with this receiver, or indeed any other that supports DiSEqC 1.2.

The Slovenian-made SM3D12 mount is housed within a formidable-looking diecast casing, and looks built to last; the accompanying instruction manual quotes a lifetime of at least 50,000 movement cycles. It offers 30 satellite positions and makes provision for USALS (Universal SAtellite Location System), which is also known as Goto X. If your receiver supports this – as the 9500 models do – installation will be greatly simplified. Although you can use any offset dish of up to 1.4m (average) diameter with the SM3D12, a range of dishes designed specifically with the mount in mind is available. There are currently 85cm, 95cm and 1.1m versions available. For serious enthusiasts, a 1.3m model will follow shortly.

Like most DiSEqC 'dish-swingers', the SM3D12 is a horizon-to-horizon design. Importer Viking Satellite claims a 100° range of dish movement, although a pointer and scale provided on the body of the mount to indicate approximate arc position would suggest that it will travel from 60°E to 60°W. The mount's internal limit switches, preset in the factory, deliberately restrict the range to avoid unnecessary wear and tear. Still, 50°E to 50°W will include all of the satellites likely to be of interest here in the UK. In design, the SM3D12 hardly breaks new ground. It bolts on your existing dish pole with a bracket that allows the mount's elevation to be set between 10° and 70° during installation. The calibration scale is embossed on the mount on both sides. Setting it couldn't be simpler. The angle that the pointer – in reality, the edge of the bracket – should register on the scale is your site latitude. Note that your dish pole can be up to 62mm in diameter but must be vertical (check with a spirit level) if it is to track the arc properly!

On the mount's base are a pair of standard 'F' sockets that connect to your dish/LNB and receiver. The existing cable that originally went to the LNB now goes to the mount's 'rec' terminal – you'll have to make a flylead from a length of coax and two 'F' plugs to connect the LNB to the mount's other socket. Once the connections are in place they should be sealed with self-amalgamating tape to prevent moisture ingress. You don't have to go to the trouble of laying any other cables because your DiSEqC receiver sends dish-movement commands and power for the mount up the LNB cable. Next to the sockets are a pair of push-buttons that manually rotate the dish or west, in short bursts or continuously. They're provided for installation purposes.

The self-assembly @Sat dish is light, and yet fairly sturdy by virtue of its design. Its all-important reflector, made of 'Zincor' steel (zinc-plated for rust-proofing) is produced using a stamping process. The dish's narrow LNB boom is securely held in place by a pair of stays, and so there will be no unwanted play. U-bolts go straight on to the stubby motor pole – the only dish alignment is elevation, which involves nothing more complicated than lining up the flat of the U-bolt with a printed label on the dish bracket. The two threads of the U-bolt go through the motor pole, and so if you plan to use an existing dish its elevation angle is set to a value derived from your site latitude. No hard maths is involved here – @Sat has done it for you, courtesy of a table printed in the manual. The final part of installation is easy, owing to USALS, but make sure your receiver is set up for a USALS/Goto X mount.

Plug in your site latitude and longitude, choose a satellite, and the dish will move to a calculated position. You can then swivel the whole dish/mount assembly on the pole until a channel on that satellite is received. Using a meter – we used the Lacuna digital model – you can fine-tune the positioning of the mount for maximum signal. Once this has been done the mount should be aligned properly and so all of the other satellites should come though – provided, of course, that your pole is vertical and that the dish has a clear view of the sky. If your receiver doesn't support USALS alignment will be a bit trickier, but still within the scope of an enthusiastic amateur. A signal strength meter (a receiver, portable TV and good weather will suffice!) and compass are recommended here. The manual, which needs to be tidied up a bit, provides some basic alignment instructions. Our only real criticism is that the base-mounted arc/scale pointer – useful for non-USALS installation – is difficult to read when the dish is in place. @Sat could have avoided this problem by designing the scale and pointer on top of the unit, as is the case with some other DiSEqC mounts.

So how does it perform? Very well, if our experiences are anything to go by. With the 95cm dish and a 0.7dB, we found that we could lock on plenty of weaker signals, including 1°W (Thor/Intelsat 707). The mainstream satellites, such as Hot Bird and Astra 1x/2x, caused no problems, even with fairly heavy rain. As with other DiSEqC mounts, the SM3D12 draws its power from the receiver's LNB supply. It is thus not quite as fast as a conventional motorised dish, but that's not necessarily a bad thing because it means operation is quieter. What's more, the dish is less likely to shoot past the wanted position. Indeed, over a period of nearly two months the dish never failed to move to the selected satellite. Moving from Thor (1°W) to the Astra 1 cluster at 19°E took around 15 seconds if a horizontal channel was selected, or 20 seconds for a vertical one. The difference in speed is experienced because when a horizontal channel is selected, the LNB voltage (used by satellite systems to select polarity) is higher. Needless to say, all DiSEqC mounts suffer from the same problem.

The SM3D12 claims to be able to drive a dish of up to 1.4m, which is a good deal more than the 1m to which most DiSEqC mounts are restricted. But it will be very slow with a large dish, and we wouldn't want to wait 30 seconds or more for a trip between satellites separated as far as Thor and Astra 1.

In all then, an excellent dish/mount and a good partner for the @Sat receiver, or any other equipped with USALS or basic DiSEqC 1.2 ■

MONDEAL 9200 PLUS

ALEX LANE TRIES OUT A FREE-TO-AIR RECEIVER THAT'S A GREAT DEAL FOR NEWCOMERS BUT NEEDS SOME POLISHING FOR LONG-TERM APPEAL

It's a sign of the renewed popularity of satellite TV that receivers have become so cheap. The basic hardware inside a free-to-air receiver, as found on a standard PCI satellite receiver card, costs less than £25, and it's possible to add the power supply, digital-to-analogue converters, case, remote control, user-interface software, shipping costs, and still put them out with a reasonable mark-up (though not an unreasonable one) for for less than £100.

The Mondeal 9200 Plus is designed for those people who want to get into free-to-air satellite without spending a lot of cash. Add a 60cm or 70cm dish to the package, plus LNB, cable and mount, and you'll be touching £200, or £300 with installation.

There are hundreds free-to-air channels broadcasting from several dozen countries in reach of such equipment, not to mention the thousands of subscription TV channels and 'special interest' channels, from sailing to sex.

The £95 receiver shapes up pretty well at first look. It's compact, and the clean silver fascia doesn't win any prizes for original thinking, but it's a good example of the current state in 'lifestyle' design. There certainly won't be any problems reading the large four-digit LED display or operating the chunky buttons. The remote handset is nothing unusual either, but it's easy to use and has several handy extra function buttons for use both while watching and using the setup menus.

The user menus are clear and easy to read, and are all very obviously titled, except the menu you need to set up your LNB and search for channels. Oddly, this is titled 'TP configuration', and it's a simple menu which allows you to control the most important aspects of the receiver very easily once you find it.

The Mondeal 9200 Plus can work with any kind of LNB, and comes preset for a standard universal LNB. You can select up to four fixed LNBs using DiSEqC 1.0 commands (or the 22kHz tone if you're not using a universal LNB), or it can be motorised using DiSEqC 1.2.

The full set of DiSEqC motor commands is supported, including limit setting and either continuous or step movement. Unusually, the user is able to define how large the movement steps are when fine-tuning a satellite's position, and the mount can be told to calculate other positions based on your location and a reference satellite. However, there's no support for USALS auto-location, so the mount will have to be programmed with your latitude and longitude by the supplier.

Motorised dish positions are actually set in a sub-menu of the TP Configuration menu, not in the DiSEqC 1.2 settings menu. This isn't revealed anywhere in the manual, and it took us some time to find it, which is a terrible oversight and very disappointing.

You can have up to 32 positions with DiSEqC 1.2, chosen from the database of almost 40 satellites, or adding transponders for up to 20 of your own. The TP Configuration menu allows you to edit, add or delete the transponder list before you search, and you can search several satellites in succession. It's also possible to search individual transponders (using a network search to find related transponders), and in this mode you can select to look for free-to-air channels only, or to add channels manually using PID figures and entering the channel names through an onscreen keyboard. The symbol rate range of 1,000-45,000 is wide enough to get any channel you'd want in the Ku-band.

The onscreen memory meter indicates that the Mondeal 9200 Plus can store up to 3,640 TV and radio channels, although the manual claims it can store only 2,000 and the box says 4,000. The latter figure is probably a rough estimate, the former because memory prices have come down since the manual was produced. At any rate, that's enough memory for a free-to-air receiver, provided you delete the scrambled channels you don't need.

+ GREAT PRICE, IMPRESSIVE PERFORMANCE

– DIFFICULT MOTORISED SETUP

This is something you'll want to do anyway, because there's only one favourite channels list. That's the sort of shortcoming which is common on budget receivers, and on satellites like Astra or Hot Bird it soon gets tedious scrolling through hundreds of scrambled channels to get the one you want. You can sort the list in several ways, including by satellite, alphabetically, and between free and scrambled channels, which certainly helps. There's also a channel-lock to stop little'uns straying on to the many free adult channel which have sprung up on the European satellites.

'THE MONDEAL 9200 PLUS IS DESIGNED FOR THOSE PEOPLE WHO WANT TO GET INTO FREE-TO-AIR SATELLITE WITHOUT SPENDING A LOT OF CASH'

The onscreen channel list is well-presented, with 15 channels displayed next to a large picture of the current channel, with tuning details and a signal meter, and with one button press you can go to the satellite list and change to a different position.

For what it's worth, the Mondeal 9200 Plus has a simple but nice five-channel/four-hour EPG display, although channels which actually transmit EPG data are becoming increasingly rare. There's also a built-in teletext decoder, or you can use the one on your TV if you prefer that.

Picture quality is quite impressive for such a cheap receiver, especially using the RGB Scart output, although you may be pressed to find many channels for whom picture quality is a priority in today's digital universe. There's also a useful mode which shows one live picture and stills from either three or 11 other channels, and you can select which is the live picture. It's handy if you're in the mood to channel-surf.

Sound quality is also very impressive for a budget receiver, especially since there's an optical digital audio output with Dolby Digital support on this receiver (these aren't expensive any more, however much Sky tries to convince us they're a luxury item on Digiboxes).

The Mondeal 9200 Plus is typical of today's budget free-to-air receivers. It's a very competent package which will allow the satellite beginner a risk- free way into the world of foreign TV, but it's not an amazing receiver, either ■

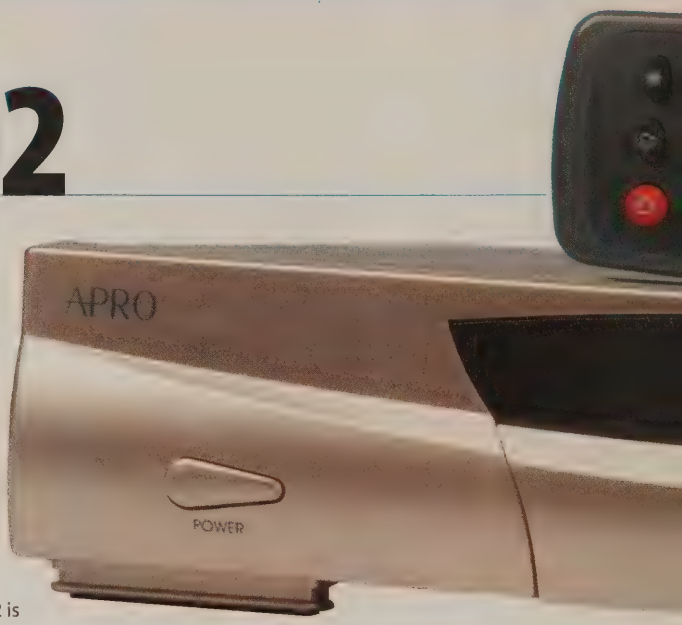
APRO CI2002

GEOFF BAINS FINDS THE APRO CI2002 IS A PRETTY BASIC MACHINE, BUT WITH A COUPLE OF NEAT TRICKS UP ITS SLEEVE



Hardly a month goes by without a new name in satellite receivers surfacing. Apro is a new one on us and the Apro CI2002 is the first receiver we've seen from this stable.

The CI2002 is definitely at the low end of the price spectrum – under £120 for a DiSEqC motorised receiver can't be too bad. It doesn't boast a great many features but it does the basic job and for this price, beggars can't be choosers.

This receiver has the air of yesterday's model about it. It's made solidly enough with metal casing for all but the front panel, but the satin gold finish and the swooping front curves are not the trendy silver clean lines most favoured these days.

The curvy front panel includes a flap beneath the four-digit display that hides two common interface slots. Apro reckons that the CI2002 is happy with CAMs for Viaccess, Irdeto, Mediaguard, Nagravision, Conax and Cryptoworks so this receiver has the potential to pick up most of what's broadcast to Europe.

The remote control handset is definitely low grade. It works fine but looks like something from a child's toy – the sort of remote handed out with analogue Sky receivers about eight years ago. Still, you're probably not buying this receiver for the style factor.

You can expand your satellite choice with either a motorised dish using the DiSEqC 1.2 standard, or a number of fixed dish LNBs (either on the same or separate dishes). Again, DiSEqC can come into play here, or you can use the 0/12V switching output provided. In fact, this would enable you to connect up eight LNBs (using both DiSEqC and 0/12V switching) or use, say, one fixed dish and one motorised antenna.

Setting up the CI2002 is straightforward enough. First off, a dedicated key on the remote will bring up the UHF tuning menu and the left and right keys will then change the tuning – so you can set it up 'blind'.

The satellites to receive are set up first. Each satellite is selected from the list of 81 (including eight undefined, for new launches) and how it is to be accessed is defined in a menu – 0/12V switch, DiSEqC or mini-DiSEqC settings, DiSEqC 1.2 enabled/disabled, all the time with one eye on the signal strength and quality meters.

If a DiSEqC 1.2 mount is enabled then you can also access the mount menu where each satellite is searched for and the positioner settings saved. The CI2002 only supports standard DiSEqC 1.2, so you will have to find all the satellites yourself. What's more, moving the dish 'manually' is a tedious process, because to change direction you have to select which direction from the menu and then press OK to actually move the mount. However, the CI2002 allows the size of movement step to be set.

When the satellites are all defined and set up, they can be scanned for channels either individually or all at once. The CI2002 can be set to scan for all channels, just free-to-air channels or just encrypted channels. You can also decide whether or not to search for other network transponders.

The CI2002 is not the fastest at this job. To scan Hot Bird took about 12 minutes – OK, so it found 842 TV channels and 594 radio stations on 107 transponders, but nonetheless, that's not too swift.

You can also scan individual transponders on any satellite (and set the PID values too) and edit the transponder details (frequency, polarity, and symbol rate – FEC is found automatically) and save the new settings in the satellite

BACK TO BACK

The onscreen channel list doesn't indicate which satellite it's on Configure up to eight LNBs with 12V of DiSEqC switches...

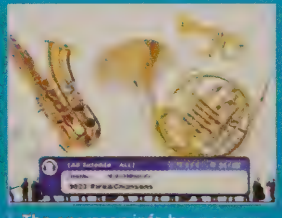
... or use a motorised dish for complete freedom



The onscreen info bar pops up when you change channels transponder list for the next full scan.

All the channels found can be accessed from the onscreen list. This doesn't distinguish which satellite they came from, but once selected it does give a small window screen of the current channel and basic tuning information (including satellite) on it. The channel list itself not only shows which channels are encrypted but even what encryption system is used.

The list can be edited (channels renamed, deleted or moved around) and sorted (to list the channels in transponder order, alphabetical, reverse alphabetical, FTA only, encrypted only or just those encrypted in any one of the scrambling systems found). You can also find a channel by its name, entering one letter at a time until you have it.

The CI2002 also has nine favourite channel lists, each of nine channels. These don't work like most favourite lists. While watching TV you can press the favourite button to display a menu of favourite lists (and the nine channels last viewed). Selecting one of these displays (after a few seconds) a mosaic of nine still frames from all the channels in that list. You can select which is live and then zoom it to full-screen viewing.

Changing channel displays the information banner and with a press of the 'i' key also shows the symbol rate, PIDs and signal strength. The EPG key displays a grid of five channels and programmes, overlaid over the channel and the 'i' key now pops up the synopsis details.

You cannot select recording events from the EPG but a separate menu takes care of that. Bizarrely, the CI2002's eight-event timer will switch on the receiver only up to 24 hours ahead. Clearly, no use for recording while on holiday, this is more of an alarm clock feature.

The CI2002 has a final trick up its sleeve while viewing a channel too. Press the pause button and not only does the picture freeze but a moving, live window is overlaid on top (and can be moved around the screen) – the perfect way to copy down a phone number while keeping an eye on the programme.

Despite all this wizardry of TV watching, the pictures from the CI2002 are a touch disappointing. We compared Sky News studio material – a known, good quality source – using a Digibox and the CI2002, and the Apro images are a little bit fuzzy in places, with slightly garish colours. It's by no means a bad picture – just not as good as one or two others. Sound quality, on the other hand, is quite up to scratch.

There are not many receivers that can offer CI slots and DiSEqC motor drive for this kind of money. The CI2002 won't provide you with every latest feature of satellite reception but it will do the basic job. It's easy to use, and comes at an attractive price ■

AVC BROADBAND

GEOFF BAINS SPEEDS UP THE INTERNET AND WATCHES AND RECORDS DIGITAL TV ON HIS PC, THANKS TO THE FIRST REAL UK BROADBAND SERVICE TO USE ASTRA 2

Surely the most convenient (and popular) satellite internet service for the UK would be one that uses the same satellites as Sky Digital, so users would not need to add another dish to their home. The first really credible and serious attempt to provide UK broadband via satellite from Astra 2 has only now surfaced.

AVC Broadband is using capacity on Astra 2A under the umbrella and infrastructure of Astranet – SES-Astra's own proxy server that is already providing satellite broadband to 15 other countries – so the technology and infrastructure is neither new nor untested.

And AVC is already a player in satellite – it provides about 200,000 installations each year for Sky Digital.

Satellite internet is not cheap. You'll pay just under £250 for all the equipment you need for the AVC service, installed and working, and another £30 to 'connect'. Ironically, even if you already have a Sky Digital system, the AVC installers will put up a new 48cm dish (60cm in far-flung areas), along with a quad LNB (as used for Sky Plus) and run a cable to your PC. Of course, the Digibox can then be connected to the new dish.

Your £280 also buys you the PC-based satellite receiver (or DVB adapter) to pick up the satellite-delivered data – a Hauppauge WinTV Nova USB-s (sold separately for about £150). This is a plastic case about the size of a paperback novel which sits near your PC, connected to a USB socket (it's a USB 2.0 connection but it will work OK with USB 1.0 PCs) and to the LNB via a single F-connector.

If you have the necessary to pick up AVC Broadband: dish, LNB, DVB adapter, cabling and everything in place – then you can forgo the installation charge. You'll still pay the connection fee and you'll have to install the software yourself (downloaded from AVC at 56K!) and you miss the 12-month warranty.

For the test a pre-production version of the installation software was used without the help of an AVC engineer. Installation involved first loading Hauppauge's drivers for the DVB adapter, then its application software and finally a most confusing setup programme to configure Internet Explorer to use the proxy server. Other software was configured 'by hand' later.

Take the normal AVC Broadband package and you needn't worry about any of this. The man from AVC will install it all on your PC as well. But remember, when you (inevitably) need to reinstall everything on your PC in the future, you'll need to handle this side too (or pay for a call-out), so pay attention to what he does!

'ONCE THE SYSTEM IS UP AND RUNNING, YOU CONTINUE TO USE THE INTERNET JUST THE SAME AS YOU USED TO – EVERYTHING JUST HAPPENS FASTER'

AVC Broadband gives you a choice of three subscription packages, providing three different broadband data speeds: 256Kbit/s, 512Kbit/s and 768Kbit/s. The middle one is likely to be the most popular as it's equivalent to most ADSL services, and a good compromise between speed and cost (£34.99/month).

You'll also need to keep paying your dial-up ISP because this route is retained for the return channel. But this does mean there's no need to change your e-mail address. Indeed, once the system is up and running, you continue to use the internet just the same as you used to – everything just happens faster (and with a higher level of security, too).

Two icons on the toolbar signal that the DVB adapter is receiving a signal and that data is arriving via the proxy server, and with a couple of clicks you can 'switch off' the satellite connection to restore your connection to 56K both ways. This is a nice reminder of why you are paying for broadband – and it allows for some direct comparison speed tests.

These speeds were measured by different online speed tests conducted at different times on different days. In each case the two tests, with and without the satellite link, were conducted as closely together as possible.

This test was done with the 768Kbit/s service and, apart from using the service for everyday tasks, we also ran a number of the speed tests available on the internet. Some of these couldn't cope with the AVC Broadband system and from those that could, we got a wide range of results (see the table) which makes it difficult to know how much credence can be given to these tests (other factors such as the number of users online at the time, the speeds of the other links in the data's path across the world, and so on, all play a part in clouding the results) but what is certainly true is that AVC Broadband speeds up normal use of the internet a heck of a lot – pages load quickly and video streaming becomes practical.

What's more, unlike some satellite broadband services, there is no limit on the amount of data you can download through AVC Broadband. Astranet reckons the satellite capacity available will cope with all normal use and so the speed available is pretty consistent.

A nice bonus is that Hauppauge includes a digital TV viewer application so you can also use the adapter to access the (more than 30) free-to-air TV and (dozens of) radio channels at 28°E on your PC, either in a window or full-screen. The quality is as good as you get from any DVB receiver. The now-and-next EPG is displayed and teletext is available for the few channels that still use this.

Like a PVR, the TV viewer can also record programmes (as MPEG-2 files) on your PC's hard disc (about 1Gb an hour) for viewing later (or while still recording). However, there's no event timer or even a pause facility so it's not going to replace the Sky Plus just yet.

Of course, since the adapter has only one tuner, you cannot watch TV and browse the internet at the same time, but it adds a bit of value to the system, nonetheless.

At present, AVC Broadband offers no push (dial-up disconnected) services nor offline e-mail alerts – a bit of a drawback if you're paying per call for the back channel. However, all this, and a better way to install the software, is promised for the future.

But for now, if you're not within reach of ADSL or cable, AVC Broadband provides an excellent way around the problem.

Once set up, it is transparent in use, reliable, without any download limits…and very, very fast ■

TELEVES OCTO LNB

NOW ALL GEOFF BAINS NEEDS IS AN EIGHT-BEDROOM HOME

To watch different satellite TV channels in several different rooms in the house you need a receiver in each room fed from 'its own' LNB.

The 'traditional' method of achieving this has been to fit a quatro LNB to your dish and a multi-switch in the loft. The quatro LNB provides four outputs – horizontal low band, vertical low band, horizontal high band and vertical high band and the multi-switch routes the required signal to each of its many outputs. It's complicated and expensive but it does enable huge systems to be built up.

But for homes requiring just a few receivers a multi-switch system is too much. A quad LNB will feed up to four receivers, each output acting like a separate universal LNB. This is what Sky fits to feed the Sky Plus's two LNB inputs with two outputs left over for additional receivers.

But, say, if you want a Sky Plus in the living room and Digiboxes (or FTA receivers) in the kitchen and two bedrooms, you'll need five LNB feeds. That used to mean the multi-switch option, but now there's Televés' incredible Octo LNB.

This is a 0.7dB noise LNB with eight independent universal LNB outputs. Just put this on the dish and run cables to wherever a receiver is needed. Simple as that.

The Octo has a standard 40mm neck so it will fit most 60cm or 80cm dishes. The feedhorn is not suitable for a Sky minidish, but you should use a larger dish for such a system, anyway. Of course, this LNB does not have to be used only for Sky Digital reception and it will happily feed up to eight receivers from any single satellite.

It's a huge LNB (about 150mm tall) and it weighs a relatively hefty 0.6kg (there's a metal casing inside the mostly aesthetic plastic cover) so more flimsy feed arms may have trouble supporting it.

The two rows of four F-connectors on the bottom are (inevitably) very close together so taping up the connections to waterproof them is not at all easy. A slide-down shield on the LNB body will help to keep the rain off, but this shouldn't be relied on to keep the connections dry.

In use, the Octo LNB performs well. There are lower noise LNBs around, but 0.7dB is quite good enough for normal use (especially with an over-specified dish). There were no problems of interference between the different outputs.

This isn't a really clever solution to the problem, but it works. If you want a simple and relatively cheap way to supply several receivers the Octo LNB certainly does the trick ■

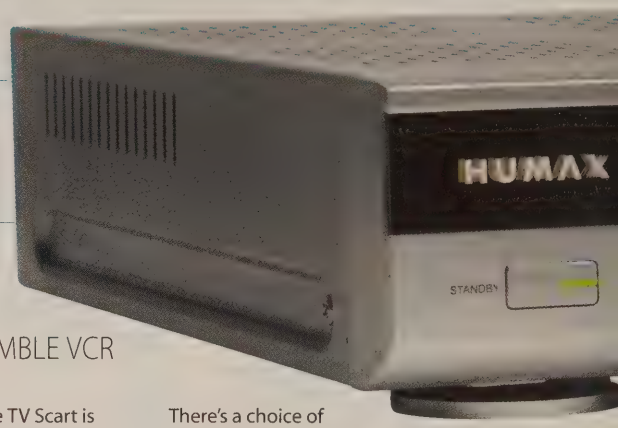
HUMAX PVR-8000T



HUMAX'S FIRST FREEVIEW PVR IS CURRENTLY THE CHEAPEST AROUND. GRANT RENNELL SAYS IT'S GOODBYE TO THE HUMBLE VCR

With Sky Plus now beginning to work its way into the public consciousness, thanks largely to a decidedly camp talking-point ad campaign, the time seems right for personal video recorders (PVRs) to finally take off in the UK.

Manufacturers certainly seem to think so, which is why we're seeing the likes of Thomson and Humax producing PVRs for the lucrative Freeview market. At £200, the PVR-8000T is cheaper than the Pace Twin Digital Recorder (the first Freeview PVR to appear on the scene) and has twice the storage capacity (40GB, equating to 20 hours of recordings). What it doesn't have in common with the latter is a twin tuner for watching one Freeview channel while recording another – that's reserved for another model expected to arrive later in the year. The 'omitted' tuner is particularly significant as, timeshifting features aside, it means the PVR-8000T can ultimately be considered more of a 21st century VCR replacement, if anything.

What Satellite & Digital TV has already had a sneak peak at Humax's forthcoming range of DTT PVRs boasting novice-friendly detachable hard drives for easy upgrading. The PVR-8000T however, sticks to the conventional route by keeping everything on the inside.

This PVR is pleasingly slimline in shape with a silver semi-mirrored fascia that's home to a large green four-digit LED display. This is flanked on the right-hand side by a circular operating pad and a row of four small buttons. A modestly featured rear panel comprises TV and VCR Scarts (the TV Scart is composite video, S-video and RGB-capable, while the VCR is only S-video and composite), a composite video output and a UHF loopthrough with a modulator for use with Scart-less TVs. Audio connectors come in the form of stereo phonos and an optical digital output with Dolby Digital support. There's also an RS232 port for making software updates using your PC (this can also be done over-the-air).

The flat remote control is marred by the slightly tacky-looking metallic plastic coating, but it boasts an intelligently organised button arrangement. VCR-equivalent buttons for the receiver's PVR functions are grouped together at the bottom of the handset, although larger pause and record buttons would have been nice seeing as these are likely to see the most use.

The receiver automatically tunes in available channels on initial start up, and it's testament to the digital tuner's exceptional sensitivity that the receiver had no trouble locating all Freeview channels, even in our relatively weak signal area.

The attractively blue-coloured menu system conceals a wealth of configuration options. There's a choice of aspect ratios (4:3, 16:9, 16:9 letterbox, 14:9 letterbox or centre cut-out), both menu transparency and banner timeout settings can be altered and password-protected locks can be imposed.

Signal strength and quality can be checked for the current channel and there's a detailed manual search function should you need to go hunting for the odd missing channel or two after the automatic scan is complete.

Pressing OK when watching a channel brings up the channel lists. The TV and Radio list can be sorted in order of name or number and up to five favourites lists can be created and named.

Pressing the 'i' key brings up the quarter-screen now-and-next programme information banner that lists four channels at a time and includes a progress bar and a row of icons indicating, among other things, if MHEG-5 interactive services and subtitles are available. Pressing 'i' again brings up a half-screen page showing programme synopses.

The seven-day EPG is accessed using the Guide key but, like most Freeview products

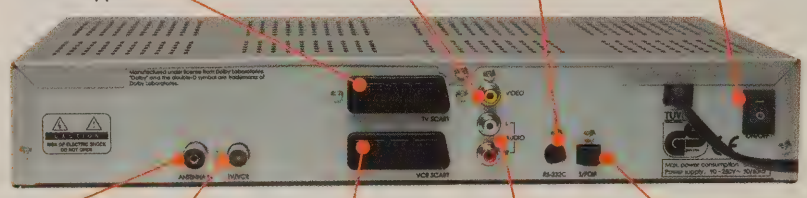
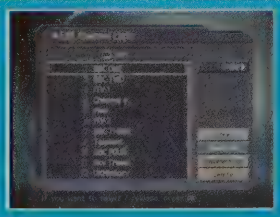
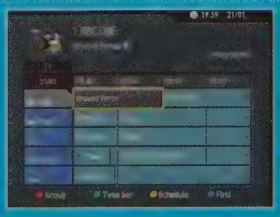
BACK TO BACK

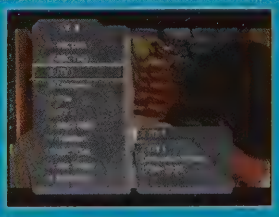




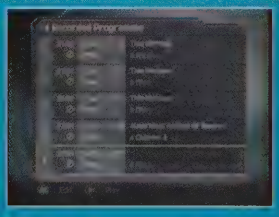
Once found, channels can be PIN-locked or deleted



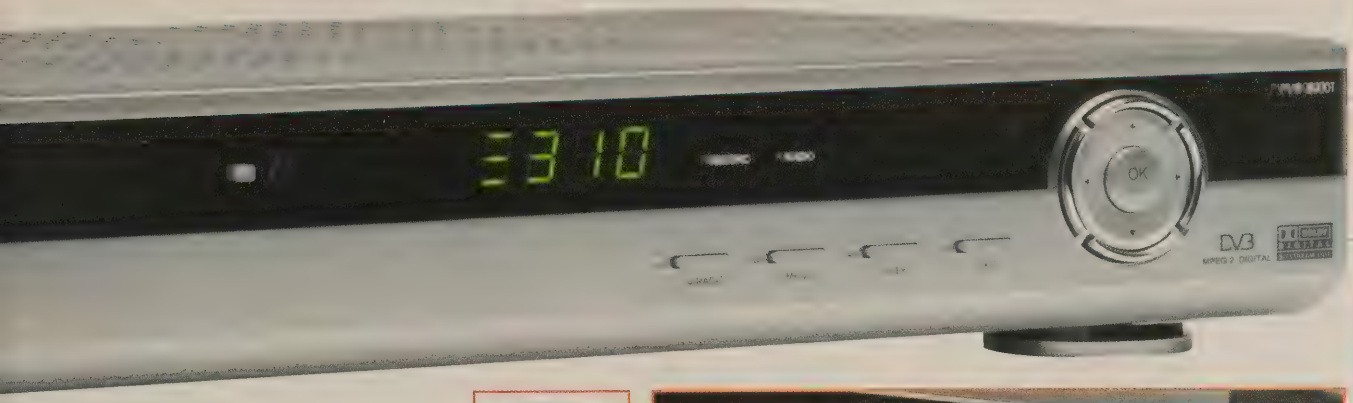
Select 'Schedule' on the EPG to set up recordings in advance



Pressing OK brings up the channel list



Recorded programmes are automatically named



(excluding the Fusion range) only displays now-and-next information at present. The fact that this can be used to schedule recordings (by highlighting a programme and pressing the yellow button) will make it very useful when seven day information is eventually broadcast (Humax has no plans to adopt the Fusion EPG at present).

Which brings us neatly onto the recording functions. Like Sky Plus, the PVR-8000T keeps a constant cache of what you watch (up to one hour and seven minutes in our experience) allowing you to pause and rewind without needing to press the record button beforehand. Unlike Sky Plus however, you cannot submit a cached programme to the hard disc for posterity.

Initiating a permanent recording involves pressing the record button, setting a recording using the Schedule option in the EPG, or entering the relevant details into the Recording Schedule (essentially a manual timer) section of the menu.

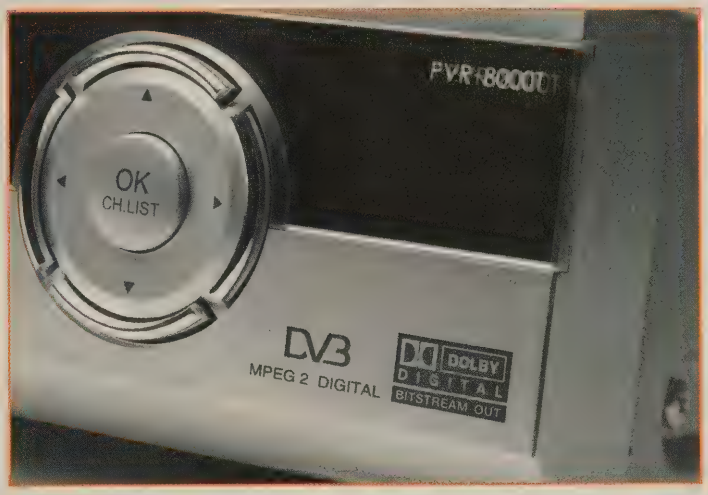
Up to 20 recordings can be scheduled (with the option to repeat once, daily or weekly) and an onscreen programme reminder tells you when a recording is about to start. Programmes are accessed in the Recorded Programme section of the Record menu and automatically labelled with the name, date shown, duration, channel and time shown. They can also be renamed and PIN-locked.

+ GOOD VALUE ENTRY-LEVEL PVR, USEFUL RECORDING FEATURES

– ONLY ONE DIGITAL TUNER, MANUAL CAN BE CONFUSING

There are no quality settings but the 40GB capacity should be sufficient for most users and you can transfer recordings onto videotape. However, you cannot record while playing back a previous recording.

Helping you to keep track of where you are in a recording (whether cached or permanent) is the handy Time bar which appears every time you use one of the PVR buttons.



A counter on the right tells you how far behind the live broadcast you are and is accompanied by a progress bar indicating the same.

To the right of this are four icons which can be selected to initiate numerous trick features. Slow Motion is self-explanatory, Skip enables you to jump forwards through a recording at 30sec increments (ideal for skipping ad breaks) and Replay jumps back seven seconds, which is very handy for sporting events. The most useful of the four is Direct Jump which lets you scroll along the progress bar using an onscreen arrow and jump directly to the desired point in a recording. There are three speed settings for rewinding and fast-forwarding through recorded or cached material and pressing Stop at any time brings you back to the currently showing live broadcast.

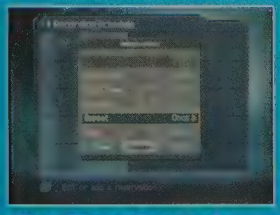
Selecting the fifth icon on the Time bar brings up a playlist of stored recordings to choose from.

If you get bored with the joys of timeshifting or TV in general, there are four basic games to play, not to mention a blisteringly quick-to-load MHEG-5 engine for interactive services.

At £200 the PVR-8000T represents great value as an introduction to the novelty of recording without the need for videotape, as well as being a superior Freeview adapter to boot. Pictures are a little soft but there are little signs of artefacts and recordings are just as pleasing to the eye. Sound from the audio outputs is crisp and clear, particularly using the superior optical connection option.

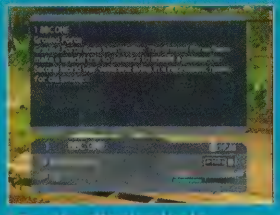
If we have gripes, it's that the manual and some of the onscreen messages are occasionally rather poorly translated, particularly when it comes to learning how to use some of the recording features.

What's more, a single digital tuner could be considered rather limiting by some for reasons already mentioned. Fingers crossed then, on this evidence, the forthcoming twin tuner model will turn out be the real Pace Twin beater ■



Up to 20 recordings can be scheduled in advance

The time bar makes time-shifting easy to understand



Pressing 'i' twice displays now-and-next info

TECHSAN TECHVIEW TSL-15T

FLAT PANEL IDTVs ARE FINALLY A REALITY. BUT, ASKS GRANT RENNELL, DOES THE TECHVIEW LCD TV HAVE MORE THAN JUST A DIGITAL TUNER GOING FOR IT?

Flat panel screens and Freeview – two buzzwords that, if sales figures are to be believed, set consumers hearts alight these days. It may seem odd then that, until recently, few manufacturers have seen fit to combine the two in one tidy, space-saving package.

This in part due to the fact that TVs are designed with the international market in mind and so far only a relatively few number of countries have embraced digital terrestrial TV.

The TSL-15T is then, to our knowledge, the first of its kind – an LCD TV with an onboard digital terrestrial tuner. A lot has been crammed into this (by nature) rather compact 15in IDTV. Indeed, it's entirely digital as there wasn't room to include an analogue tuner.

This IDTV has a pleasantly bold design with a shapely and striking row of buttons underneath the screen and a long speaker grille stretched along the bottom. A fold-out stand on the rear means the set leans away from you when it is stood on a flat surface, but this can be removed if you prefer to wall-mount it.

Also located on the rear are the downward pointing connections, a single VCR Scart with composite and S-video support, a UHF loopthrough, a headphone socket and a single common interface (CI) slot. The whole thing is controlled by a tidily organised remote, though this can be a rather unresponsive when not pointed directly at the screen.

Aerial in place, you're first greeted with an efficient automatic tuning process before the watching can begin. A slickly presented aquamarine-hued menu system lets you choose from 16:9 or Zoom aspect ratios, configure your Scart output and select up to four favourites lists. The tuning menu is where you can initiate a full rescan or update of the channel list and also check through detailed lists of technical broadcast information including signal meters.

Pressing Select brings up the now-standard onscreen channel list and there's also a Pause function which freezes the current onscreen picture.

Unusually for a Freeview product, the functional now-and-next EPG (which displays up to five channels at a time with programme info along the bottom for the current channel) is not as useful as the programme info bar. Pressing the 'i' button brings up a now-and-next banner which can be expanded to let you browse through programme synopses, including what's on other channels – all without needing to switch over from the current channel.

Another welcome inclusion in this increasingly red button-centric TV world is MHEG-5 support for interactive and digital text services.

Picture performance on the TSL-15T is strong in some areas and weak in others, exhibiting many of the traits that have dogged LCD sets in the past.

As far as viewing distance goes, when viewed straight on the panel is sufficiently bright, but when sitting and looking up at it the picture does dim rather. If you're looking for something to adorn a desk in the study or, perhaps, the kitchen worktop, then close up to a distance of around 3ft results again are rather disappointing.

Although not overbearing, pixellation and shimmering are evident, particularly with fast movement, such as a fast-moving helicopter shot of a coral reef on Sky Travel. Contrast levels are also rather poor despite our efforts with tweaking the settings, with murky patches of black and often overly bright colours.

Pictures do appear more coherent and convincing from a distance but these bugbears may well disappoint those looking for the sharpness and detail they've come to expect from digital TV broadcasts.

Meanwhile, audio quality from the 2.5W speakers is acceptable for TV transmissions, but it would have been nice to see some external phonos too, even if this is designed as a portable TV.

Techsan is to be applauded for leading the pack with the TSL-15T but, in the end, the average picture quality counts against the otherwise slick presentation.

We predict Techsan could soon have quite a fight on its hands when the likes of Sony and Sharp issue their own flat panel IDTVs over the coming months ■

No more need for Panic

DAVE TAYLOR ASSESSES THE WORTH OF OFFERINGS FROM DON'T PANIC, AND SAYS GOOD RIDDANCE TO OUTGOING TV WATCHDOG THE ITC

I'm afraid I panicked. I have spent the month trying to review the hardcore channel Don't Panic and can now officially announce that I am a teapot.

I took delivery of a Blue Ice CAM a few months ago. This CAM has built-in decryption for a lifetime subscription to Free-X TV and a six-month subscription to Don't Panic. I rather lost interest in it for a while as it simply didn't spark into life when I tuned into the specified frequency.

Don't Panic is broadcast from Hot Bird 12.092GHz/H, S/R 27500, FEC 3/4. All I ever got from the none-too-helpful interface of my Technomate 8000 receiver was 'Service Not Running'. I am still wondering what this abstract phrase actually means. The receiver detects a strong signal and displays lots of blobs on the signal strength bar graph. The receiver also alternatively displays encryption types of Irdeto and Unknown (presumably IceCrypt). This suggest that there is a signal being transmitted. The CAM helpfully displays a message of 'No Access' if there isn't a valid viewing card so I assume that 'Service Not Running' means something else. Perhaps one day I will find out.

After having ignored the problem for a few weeks, I felt that my readers would like to know a little about the programming and so decided to re-attempt a viewing. I had the notion that maybe some details about the tuning parameters may have changed so I decided to re-scan 12.092GHz. An obvious ploy, but not one I like to do often as my receiver deletes my favourites list whenever I scan for transponder changes.

Anyway, it proved successful so I am able to provide a brief review. Don't Panic is a 24-hour service with mainly feature length videos punctuated by approximately 10 minutes of advertising between films.

The films themselves are not interrupted by adverts. I liked the idea that there is a choice of languages available, but I am not sure how many of these choices are actually implemented.

It's a bum rap for the girls on Playboy TV's special night on March 27

Programming is varied but there is an over-reliance on old cheap American videos.

'PROGRAMMING IS VARIED BUT THERE IS AN OVER-RELIANCE ON OLD CHEAP AMERICAN VIDEOS'

The selection of these is not disastrous and even includes a few from the golden age of porn. But I am afraid that these have passed their sell-by-date in this particular household.

Fetish material also has a key place in the schedules. I should leave it to those that appreciate a particular genre to pass their expert opinions, but I rather guess that the films shown are not the cream of the crop.

None of the material was in any way extreme.

Certainly, in terms of channel-hopping in competition with Spice Platinum and Free-X TV, Don't Panic scored a distinct third place.

I stumbled upon the Don't Panic website at http://www.dontpanictv.net/uk/home.htm but the TV schedule page was a month out of date. In fact, over the past few days the site has been permanently down.

Towards the end of the month under review, the channel reverted to 'Service Not Running'. But this time I didn't panic, I decided to take it easy and watch Spice Platinum/Free-X TV instead!

CENSOR CHANGE

We can now say a far-from-fond farewell to the ITC, the satellite TV regulator which brought us censorship by 'taste and decency', and welcome new regulator Ofcom, whose remit is to regulate according to 'generally accepted standards'.

I hope soon to report on the schedule for consulting about the guidelines governing sex on satellite. Possibly there will now be a shift to allow R18s on subscription services.

Readers may also like to know that there is an opportunity to let the British Board of Film Classification know a little more about public opinion.

It has set up a simple online survey at its website, www.bbfc.co.uk ■

In the mood

Playboy TV's highlights for March include the start of a new series of 7 Lives Xposed.

So who pulled the trigger on last season's finale?

When adult star Devinn Lane invited six strangers to live with her last time, the fun and sex ended in gunshots.

Find out who ended up on the wrong end of the gun and prepare yourself for three times the sex, orgies and catfights as the all-new housemates move in (starts March 19 from midnight).

It's College Girls Week from March 15 at 8pm, when every night for a week you can enjoy an hour of sizzling students getting wild and bare.

The strand includes a new show, Sorority Sweeties – they're sweet, wide-eyed innocents living away from home for the first time, what could they possibly get up to?

Over on The Adult Channel, February 6 sees Fetish Night. Bondage, rubber, feet, leather, and panties, to name a few.

There's also First Time Anal Night, when the girls find themselves getting a little behind (March 27).

And over on Television X – The Fantasy Channel you can catch up with the latest conquests of stalwart studs in The Omar Show (every Wednesday, 10.30pm) and Ben Dover (every Friday at 10.25pm).

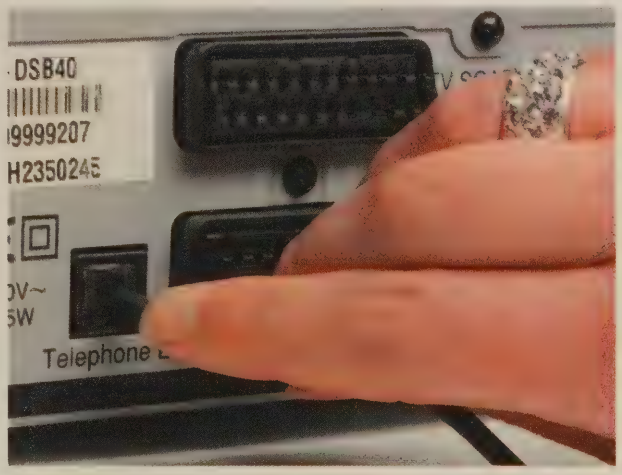
Connecting completes the digital picture

YOU MAY HAVE HEARD THAT ALL SKY DIGIBOX OWNERS SHOULD MAKE SURE THAT THEIR RECEIVER IS CONNECTED TO THEIR TELEPHONE LINE, BUT WHY?

If your set-top box is not connected to a telephone line you may not notice the difference at first, but eventually you'll find that some services simply do not work. For example, when you settle down on the sofa to order a film, or go to place a bet during the big match, you will find that you'll just get an error message from the Digibox.

This need never happen. Instead of calling your satellite retailer or the Sky customer service helpline, you should be able to nip the problem in the bud by making sure that your Digibox is connected to the phone line. It's not just irritating, you are also losing the ability to make full use a wide variety of services that complete the package of digital satellite entertainment.



DON'T MISS OUT

To understand why your Digibox should be connected to a phone line it helps to understand what services are activated by the telephone connection.

Here is a list of facts and services that will help you to stay connected.

■ The free Digibox offer from Sky saves you over £200. One of the contractual conditions of this offer is that the box is connected to a telephone line in order to make sure that all services are activated. The connection doesn't cost the consumer a penny unless they choose to use a pay service.

■ Pay-per-view events are most easily activated through the telephone system. This includes watching Sky Box Office Movies and Premiership Plus matches.

■ Sky Active E-mail users can access the free e-mail service without a computer. The Sky Digital remote control, or Sky Navigator can control the easy to use system. Sky Active allows you to send and receive e-mail and store up to 50 e-mail addresses.

'SKY ACTIVE E-MAIL USERS CAN ACCESS THE FREE E-MAIL SERVICE WITHOUT A COMPUTER OR ANY PC EXPERIENCE'

■ Sky Active Home Shopping gives you access to high street names from the comfort of your sofa, including travel, takeaway food, electrical goods, sports goods and a lot more.

■ With Sky Active you can do your banking through the TV 24 hours a day, 365 days a year. Access your account, transfer money, check balances, pay bills and more, securely.

■ Sky Active betting service enables you to have a flutter while watching your favourite sports events.

■ Sky News Active Voting users can register their votes on current affairs and issues relating to the news as it happens at the press of a button.

■ Play Jam, Sky Gamestar and games in Sky Active are all available in the interactive menu. Register high scores or pay-to-play the best games on your Digibox! ■

A pirate's life for me

Pirates Of The Caribbean was an unexpected box office smash and brought Johnny Depp A-list stardom. Elise Harris takes a look at how he got there

There have been very few successful pirate-based movies in the past 50 years. Roman Polanski's Pirates was dead in the water, The Pirate Movie was fun, but hardly lucrative, and Cut-throat Island sank without a trace.

Pirates Of The Caribbean: The Curse Of The Black Pearl proved it wasn't so much the genre as the execution that was the problem. There is hardly an original thing about Pirates, but that's beside the point. It was based on a Disneyland ride of the same name – which was itself based on the 1952 Burt Lancaster swashbuckler, The Crimson Pirate.

Johnny Depp's performance as Captain Jack Sparrow lifts the film from what otherwise would have been a fairly run-of-the-mill zombie pirate swashbuckler. Not that there are that many of those about, but it is impossible not to think of Sinbad And The Eye Of The Tiger when you see the skeletal pirates on the march.

The romantic leads are Orlando Bloom and Keira Knightley – who both look lovely but are not the most compelling of screen couples. The film doesn't really start to get interesting until Captain Jack appears. He is rum-sodden, seemingly suffering from sunstroke and more than a little camp – not your typical action hero. If Sparrow had been played by Kevin Costner he would have been sober and dignified by the middle of the film, all ready to save the day and get the girl.

Played by Depp, he stays stoned and doesn't give a stuff about getting the girl. He's far more concerned about getting his ship back.

There are a lot of comic relief characters – the two British grenadiers and the pirates Ragetti (played by Mackenzie Crook from The Office) and Pintel (Lee Arenberg – the tall dwarf in Dungeons & Dragons). Kevin McNally plays the cynical Gibbs. Without Depp, Geoffrey Rush, as the sneering Captain Barbossa, would have stolen the show.

'PLAYED BY DEPP, HE STAYS STONED AND DOESN'T GIVE A STUFF ABOUT GETTING THE GIRL. HE'S FAR MORE CONCERNED ABOUT GETTING HIS SHIP BACK'

There's enough dignity in the performances of Jack Davenport and Jonathan Pryce (as Norrington and Governor Swann) to keep the film from toppling too far into the realms of silliness.

Of course, neither side is seen as particularly virtuous or evil – and Jack is certainly neither one thing nor the other.

DEPP THOUGHT

Johnny Depp was the king of quirk for years. Even in his mainstream roles he drew out the weird. He played Ichabod Crane in Sleepy Hollow as a '14-year-old schoolgirl', fainting and pale, and his comedy Cockney accent in From Hell was straight out of The Fast Show – but is that necessarily a bad thing? Far worse is his rogue Irishman in Chocolat.

His career started in the early 1980s, when he turned to acting to subsidise his career as a musician. Depp was in Nightmare On Elm Street and Platoon, and became a teen idol in the TV series 21 Jump Street – but the traditional path didn't make him happy.

Depp quit the show and concentrated on finding less conventional roles – alongside Ricki Lake and ex-porn star Traci Lords in John Waters' Cry-Baby and as boy with blades for hands in Edward Scissorhands.

Other roles in the early 1990s – Ed Wood, Benny & Joon, Don Juan Marco and What's Eating Gilbert Grape? – showed his versatility. He proved he could play an inept transvestite movie director, a man who thinks he's Buster Keaton, another man who thinks he's Don Juan, and a small-town grocery store stacker trying to support his family. Almost all of the characters Depp has played have been outsiders. Many of them have also been lunatics.

His most conventional role in the 1995 thriller Nick Of Time was also his least successful. Depp played a father who has to track down his daughter's kidnapper within the next 90 minutes. It was shot in real-time, before 24 and the far more successful Phone Booth. It was in many ways ahead of its time – it was just a bit dull.

Depp made more of an impact in Donnie Brasco alongside Al Pacino, and as Hunter S Thompson in Terry Gilliam's adaptation of Fear And Loathing In Las Vegas. In Before Night Falls he played the dual roles of the vicious Lieutenant Victor and transvestite prostitute Bon Bon – but the film was not widely released. Roman Polanski's supernatural thriller The Ninth Gate, The Astronaut's Wife, and Blow were not exactly big money-spinners either.

Few would disagree that before Pirates Of The Caribbean it looked like Johnny Depp was never going to be a box office draw. To date, Pirates has grossed more than $600million worldwide – making it more than six times as successful as Sleepy Hollow in terms of ticket sales. So he's fairly marketable at the moment.

His next few roles are as Peter Pan author JM Barrie in Neverland, poet and philanderer Lord Rochester in The Libertine, and a horror author in Secret Window. If they all go in production Depp will be in five films during 2004. He has also been linked with a French film and an adaptation of Hunter S Thompson's The Rum Diaries.

Depp is also signed up for a Pirates Of The Caribbean sequel, for release in 2005, and as Willie Wonka in Tim Burton's Charlie And The Chocolate Factory.

It's good to see he hasn't turned his back on the peculiar

Front Row and Sky Box Office throughout March. The Biography Channel is showing a Johnny Depp special at 10pm on March 27

Jake 2.0 (on Sky One) takes the Six Million Dollar Man to a whole new level. Elise Harris talked to Christopher Gorham, star of the show

If you are lamenting the lack of good old-fashioned adventure series, you're in luck. Jake 2.0 is a show you can watch with all the family. In tone it harks back to the days of The A-Team and even older shows like the original Buck Rogers from the 1930s. It is innocent without being naïve.

Christopher Gorham, who plays Jake Foley, the show's hero, says: 'The term that the creators gave to the show is Spy-Fi – not so much a science fiction show, more an action adventure.'

In the pilot episode, computer tech Jake accidentally gets hit by shattered glass which pierces his skin, allowing experimental 'nanites' to enter his body. These nanites multiply, giving him super senses and the ability to interface with machines and computers.

From being a wannabe spy on the lower echelons of the security service, Jake becomes a valuable agent – it's more cost-effective and useful than locking him up to be experimented upon, or pensioning him off with a huge wad of hush money. This all sounds very unlikely, but is there any basis in reality? Christopher insists there is. 'It's actually based on real technology – it's real research. Scientists are developing nanotechnology and making real breakthroughs.'

Even so, he admits the technology probably isn't advanced enough to create a superhero like Jake.

Christopher says Jake becomes more adept as time goes by. 'He gets better at what he's doing. He starts out quite a normal guy – but he gets these superhero-type powers. So that changes him.'

'HE GETS BETTER AT WHAT HE'S DOING. HE STARTS OUT QUITE A NORMAL GUY – BUT HE GETS THESE SUPERHERO-TYPE POWERS. SO THAT CHANGES HIM'

Comparisons with Superman, Spider-Man, The Six Million Dollar Man and Alias are justified. That was the idea.

'It is a bit like Alias, but it doesn't take itself too seriously. It has obvious parallels to The Six-Million-Dollar Man, in fact, when it started the creators were actually trying for something that was like a modern-day version of that, with new technology.'

The original bionic man, Lee Majors, guest stars in episode 12. He plays a retired operative. Stephanie Romanov (Lilah in Angel) is in the same episode.

In the pilot Jake was shown to have a crush on ex-girlfriend Sarah Heywood (Marina Black) and although he still admires her from a distance, as the show progresses the focus is more on a different burgeoning relationship.

Christopher says: 'The relationship with Diane the scientist gets the most attention. As the series progresses they get closer – and she also becomes his doctor. She helps him cope with his new abilities.'

She's played by Keegan Connor Tracy, who has guest-starred in Dark Angel and Millennium. This is her first really big role.

There are many upcoming storylines Christopher is excited about. 'His first big mission abroad, in Germany, is where you get to see him start to really blossom. And I really enjoyed an episode where Jake is at this best friend's wedding as the best man. Later on in the series there's an episode where the nanites start to act up, Jake starts to reject them from his body and he loses his memory and ends up working in a bar.'

There are some plots he would like to see explored. Up till now the show has centred on Jake's missions, and his personal and family life have not really been touched upon.

'It would be great if you could see his family's reaction to his powers. His brother has already been introduced.'

In the pilot Jake has a best friend, but by the second episode, after Jake has been infected with the nanites, everything changes for him. The friend is transferred abroad and Jake has a new top-secret job, and all sorts of powers to deal with. He has nobody to turn to anymore except, of course, Diane.

Christopher says he would also like to see an episode in which Jake loses his powers, to see if he can successfully complete a mission using only his cunning and native abilities.

Although it's set in Washington DC, Jake 2.0 is filmed in Vancouver, Canada. Christopher is originally from California, but says it wasn't such a culture shock moving to the relatively quiet city.

Before Jake 2.0 he spent time in Toronto, working on Odyssey Five, a series that was prematurely cancelled. So he was already used to the Canadian way of life.

He admits he was disappointed Odyssey Five was cancelled so early, although if it hadn't been he would not have been available for Jake 2.0. It was also a bit of a strain being so far away from his family.

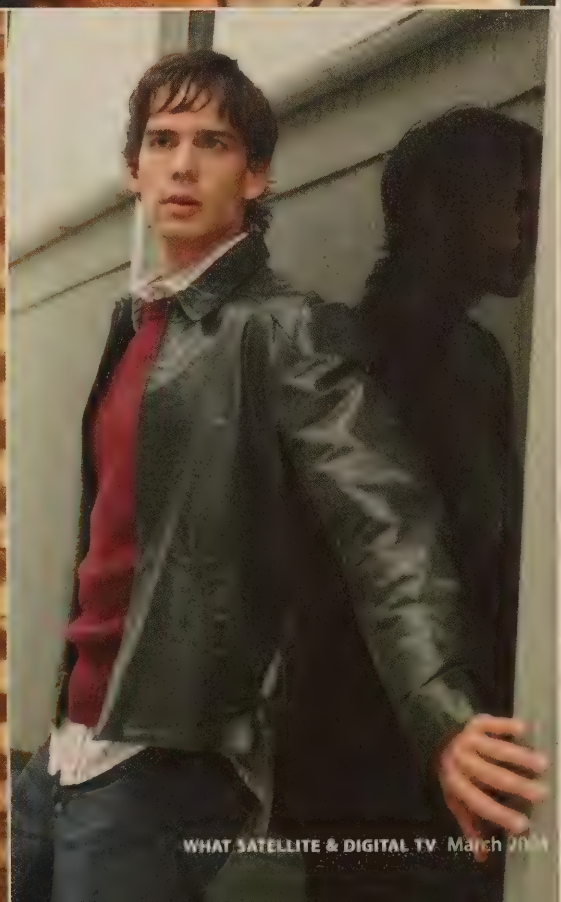
'I have a wife and kids, so moving to Vancouver was easier for me, it's far nearer. In fact, they were originally going to film it in Toronto, but I persuaded them to go for Vancouver.'

He flies back every weekend to spend time with his family. So he doesn't see much of the other Vancouver-based TV stars. He certainly doesn't have time to hang out with them.

'I spend a lot of time filming in the week – but I'm at work then,' he says.

'I see some of them on the way to and from the airport. In fact, was on a flight with Eliza Dushku and Tom Welling a few weeks ago – if that plane went down it would have been quite a story – these three superheroes all on the same flight.'

Jake 2.0 is showing every Thursday on Sky One



High anxiety

The second series of 15 Storeys High has just started on BBC Three. Elise Harris knocks on the doors and runs away

The word surreal has become so overused recently that it seems a pity to apply it to 15 Storeys High – but it is a very apt description.

Comedian Sean Lock stars as Vince, a swimming pool attendant who is addicted to baths. He is constantly annoyed by his hapless lodger Errol (Benedict Wong).

Vince, according to his father (a full-time life-model), has always been 'a miserable bugger'. He is the sort of person who will phone Hanna-Barbera studios just to try and win a bet about the knot in Yogi Bear's tie. He doesn't suffer fools gladly, which is a bit of a shame, considering.

Errol is a bit if a woman-magnet (much to his distress) who doesn't like to say 'no' to anything and loves eating chicken.

They live in a grey tower block – there is barely any colour in the series – in a flat with hardly any furniture. The sofa from the first series is gone – which means Vince usually gets the chair, and Errol has to sit on the floor.

Most of the action takes place in Vince and Errol's flat, but there are glimpses of the other tower block residents, including a man who does press-ups with small animals on his back, a very laid-back reggae work-out class, and a trucker-poet-workman who will not shut up.

The show is very much a show about nothing – in the same way Seinfeld was. Stories revolve around stolen ploughs, irritating co-workers, plastic babies, pigeon infestations and car boot sales.

The characters may seem mundane at first, but if your neighbours are anything like this lot then you probably need to move. They are all mad. And not in the irritatingly perky 'you don't have to be mad to live here… but it helps' way – more in the genuinely disturbing 'run away before they make you one of them' way.

It's a very scary place, a tower block ■

15 Storeys High can be seen on BBC Three every Thursday at 9pm

What's their storey?

15 Storeys High can trace its genesis through many previous houseshare comedies. And most of the actors can be seen elsewhere too. Some of them are familiar names – with others you will probably just recognise their faces

SEAN LOCK

Plays the show's miserable hero Vince. He also co-writes 15 Storeys High (with Martin Trenaman and Mark Jones – AKA Mark Lamarr). Sean Lock was a writer on Bill Bailey's show Is it Bill Bailey and a writer on Mark Lamarr's show Lamarr Attacks. He has also appeared on panel games QI (BBC Four), Never Mind The Buzzcocks and Have I Got News For You.

BENEDICT WONG

Vince's quiet lodger Errol. Wong has made many guest appearances on The Bill (Plus). He was also in State Of Play (UK Gold/G2) and hospital comedy TLC (with Reece Shearsmith and Alexander Armstrong) as Terry.

BILL BAILEY

In 15 Storeys High, Bill Bailey plays an enthusiastic guitar teacher. He was a regular in Spaced, as Bilbo, the comic shop owner. In Black Books he was Manny, Bernard Black's laid-back sidekick. Repeats of Spaced and Black Books can be seen on E4 at irregular intervals, and new series of both are on their way imminently.

'STORIES REVOLVE AROUND STOLEN PLOUGHS, IRRITATING CO-WORKERS, PLASTIC BABIES, PIGEON INFESTATIONS AND CAR BOOT SALES'

SIMON GODLEY

Godley plays a man with a cardigan and moustache in two episodes. His Asian wife says nothing while he frantically runs round the flat trying to achieve ridiculous tasks. He is credited with additional material in both episodes. Godley played Lestor in little seen ITV comedy Get Real (with Lindsay Duncan), you may have also seen him in The Glam Metal Detectives, Paris (with Alexei Sayle) and Happiness (Paul Whitehouse). Like Benedict Wong, he has appeared in hospital comedy TLC.

EVIE GARRATT

Evie Garratt makes an appearance as a mad old lady who feeds pigeons. You will probably recognise her as Nan from Little Britain (beloved of Jason). She has also appeared in Black Books, My Family and Bottom.

LEE CORNES

Appears as the very boring trucker poet. He was Lister's paranoia in the Red Dwarf episode Confidence And Paranoia and can also be seen in Black Adder The Third (as Shelley), Blackadder II (as a Spanish guard), The Young Ones and Bottom. See UK Gold for repeats.

MARK LAMARR

Lamarr appears as a pugnacious 'living statue'. He first made an impact on The Word, but is probably best known for hosting Never Mind The Buzzcocks. Co-writes 15 Storeys High (as Mark Jones).

KEVIN ELDON

Plays the local repair shop owner. He also played Jill's husband, Terry in Nighty Night (pictured, BBC Three) and has featured in Brass Eye, Jam and the Alan Partridge Christmas special (Knowing Me, Knowing Yule) as 'Fanny' the transvestite cookery presenter (G2). He has also appeared in Spaced and Black Books.

Sky Digital

EVERYTHING YOU EVER WANTED TO KNOW ABOUT RECEIVING AND SUBSCRIBING

How to get Sky Digital

The easiest way to get Sky Digital is to call Sky on 08702 404040, pick your package using the table opposite, and book an installation. You must have a Digibox to get Sky Digital. The Sky Digibox receiver and mini-dish are free, although non-subscribers must pay a £120 installation charge. Otherwise, installation costs £50 if you take the top Sky World package, or £70 if you take any other package.

If you'd prefer to see a demo before you buy, see an independent satellite dealer or high street electrical shop. The likes of Dixons just pass on your details to Sky's installers, but if you visit an independent, you'll also be able to assess the people who'll fit the system.

It's possible to buy the mini-dish and Digibox outright for about £299 to avoid any contractual obligations to Sky, but you'll have to do this through an independent dealer.

Sky prefers to be paid by direct debit or a standing credit card order. If you choose to pay by cheque, there's a monthly surcharge of £4.

Watching the BBC, ITV, Channel 4, and Five by satellite

All BBC channels, including regional variations, are free-to-air and can be picked up by anyone in the UK with any digital satellite receiver and a 60cm-plus dish in diameter pointed at Astra 2D. Obtaining a free Digibox and mini-dish from Sky and paying the £120 installation fee for non-subscribers can get you all of the BBC channels as well as many other FTA channels. ITV1, Channel 4, and Five remain encrypted and currently only available to those with a subscription viewing card (including lapsed subscribers) or those with a free-to-air card (no longer obtainable).
ITV2 is only available to Sky subscribers.

The Sky Digital small print

The Sky Digital contract you sign contains rules you must adhere to. Remember the following:
CONNECTION: You must keep your Digibox connected to your dish, mains power and a working phone line in the UK or Irish Republic for the first 12 months of your contract. If you don't, Sky could block your viewing card or demand you pay the value of their subsidies, currently £220.
CHANGING CHANNELS: You can alter your subscription package at any time, but you must take it for at least a month before changing again.
CANCELLATION: Sky requires a month's notice for cancellation, but since you can't cancel until the end of the first year, you'll actually pay for a minimum of 13 months.

Box Office films and pay-per-view events

These are ordered using the Box Office button on your Sky Digital remote. You'll need to give your PIN number (the last four digits of the customer number on your viewing card). All films are now Multiplay – you can watch them as many times as you like for a day after your purchase, though in Sky's case this day ends at 6am.

Sky Plus – the premium choice

Sky Plus is a next-generation Sky Digibox, with two tuners and a PC-style hard disc drive. It can record the satellite signal direct to the hard disc with no loss of quality, and holds 20 hours of material on average. The twin tuners allow you to record on one channel while watching another, or two channels at the same time and you can also pause live TV, and fast forward or reverse at up to 30 times normal speed.
Sky Plus costs £199 and requires a £10 monthly subscription to use its extra features (waived if you subscribe to two or more Premium channels), along with £50 to install a quad-output LNB on your dish.

Sky in more than one room

Every Sky Digibox has two UHF outputs, and a second TV in another room can be connected to one of these, along with a Remote Link (£10) which allows you to change channels from the second room. Alternatively, you can buy a wireless Videosender for £60-£100, which will send a high-quality picture and stereo audio up to 30m indoors and relay remote commands back to the Digibox. But if you want to watch two different channels in different rooms you'll have to buy a second Digibox for £99 (direct from Sky, or shop around for less), plus £50 to upgrade to a quad-output LNB. The second Digibox can be watched with a second subscription card costing £15/month.

Choosing your Digibox

The only way to choose which model of Digibox you use is to buy (through an independent dealer, or secondhand. Dixons allows you to state a preference, and Sky In-Home Services won't offer a choice of receivers.

Extra and secret channels

There are no secret channels hidden by Sky as a treat for those in the know. However, subscribers can add extra ITV regions using the Add New Channels feature in the Services menu on 10.832GHz/H, 10.862GHz/H, and 10.906GHz/V (all SR 22000, FEC 5/6). New channels usually rest for some time before joining the EPG, but if you find out the frequencies you can tune these in manually. There are also a dozen or so foreign channels on Eurobird that are too weak to be picked up with the mini-dish and which use odd symbol rates the Digibox cannot read.

Foreign channels

The old Sky analogue service shared the Astra 1 satellites at 19.2°E with dozens of German channels. Sky Digital broadcasts from Astra 2, 28.2°E and Eurobird, 28.5°E, each developed to give the UK a very large digital satellite capacity. There are no mainland European channels available through the basic free-to-air Sky Digital system but there are several Asian and Arabic services.

Sky Digital in Europe

Sky can't officially sell subscriptions to anyone living outside the UK or Irish Republic, and it is technically fraud to claim you're living in the UK or the Irish Republic to obtain a viewing card. Legalities aside, thousands abroad use their friends/relatives addresses, and there's a profitable industry using real and bogus UK addresses to get viewing cards which are sold round Europe at a premium.
Reception is a problem outside the UK, particularly for BBC channels. You'll need a far larger dish to get reliable reception, but reputedly, people as far away as Egypt and Morocco pick up Sky Digital.

Free-to-air channels from abroad

There are dozens of broadcast TV satellites orbiting over Europe, beaming thousands of free and encrypted channels, although only Astra 2 and Eurobird (at the 28.2°E/28.5°E position) can be picked up with the Sky Digital mini-dish and Digibox.

Two of the most important positions are Astra 1 at 19.2°E and Hot Bird at 13°E.

A 60cm dish can be used to pick up more than 60 free TV channels from Astra, while a 70cm dish will bag well over a hundred free signals from Hot Bird. The Sky Digibox has a limited symbol rate range (just 22000 or 27500), so we recommend buying a dedicated free-to-air receiver if you enjoy what you find.

The Digibox is also useless for watching encrypted channels from any foreign broadcaster, which will require a specialised receiver.

You'll find full tuning details for these channels in the blue Channel Check pages at the back of the magazine, but this month we'd like to focus on:

TW1

LOCATION: Astra 1
FREQUENCY: 12.692 GHz/H, 22000, FEC 5/6
PROFILE: This free-to-air Austrian channel shows travel programmes, weather updates and coverage of sporting events, including motorcross and beach volleyball 24 hours a day.
It also features live weather cams from the Alps, so it is an ideal channel to keep an eye on should you be planning a skiing holiday.

Sky prices and packages

There are six Sky Entertainment packages to meet different tastes and budgets, but the most common is the Family pack, which contains everything except the Sky Premium channels and the stand-alone Premium channels, and costs £19.50 a month.

- The Value Pack (£13.50/month) contains Sky One, Sky News, Discovery Home & Leisure, Bloomberg, and 10 Music Choice audio channels. For viewers interested in the Irish Republic, it also contains RTE One, Network 2 and TG4.
- The Popular Mix pack (£16.50/month) provides Discovery, Nickelodeon, Cartoon Network, Fox Kids, Paramount, UK Gold, National Geographic, Living and the Value Pack channels.
- The Knowledge Pack (£16.50/month) provides Discovery, National Geographic, History, CNBC, UK Horizons, Animal Planet and the Value Pack channels.
- The Kids And Music Pack (£16.50/month) provides The Box, Cartoon Network, Fox Kids, MTV, MTV2, MTV Base, MTV Hits, Nickelodeon, Trouble, VH-1, VH-1 Classic, and the Value Pack channels.
- The Lifestyle Pack (£16.50/month) provides Bravo, Challenge, Men & Motors, Granada Plus, UK Drama, UK Style, Trouble and the Value Pack channels.

Note: Several channels have one-hour timeshift channels which we have not listed for reasons of space.

Sky premium channels

You can add the Sky premium channels Sky Sports 1 and 2 (together known as Sky Sports World), Sky Movies Premier and Sky Movies Max (together Sky Movie World) to any of the Entertainment packs. All four Sky premium channels are known as Sky World. With the Family Pack, these cost:

- Sky Movie World, £34
- Sky Sports 1 or 2, £27.50
- Sky Sports World, £33
- Sky World, £40
- Sky Movies (screens 2, 4, 6, 8), £27
- Sky Movies (screens 1, 3, 5, 7, 9), £29
- Sky Sports 1, Sky Movies (screens 1-9), £36
- Sky Sports 1 and 2, Sky Movies (screens 1, 3, 5, 7, 9), £38.50
- Sky Sports 2, Sky Movies (screens 1-9), £33
- Sky Sports 1 and 2, Sky Movies (screens 2, 4, 6, 8), £33
- Sky Sports 1, Sky Movies (screens 1, 3, 5, 7, 9), £33
- Sky Sports 2, Sky Movies (screens 1, 3, 5, 7, 9), £33
- Sky Sports 1, Sky Movies (screens 2, 4, 6, 8), £29
- Sky Sports 2, Sky Movies (screens 2, 4, 6, 8), £29

Bonus channels

Subscribers to Sky Sports World get Sky Sports 3 and Sky Sports Xtra free. Subscribers to Sky Movie World get Sky Cinema and the Disney mini-package free.

Stand-alone premium channels

You can add several extra channels to your Sky channel selection at the monthly rates below:

- Adult & Playboy TV, £7.99
- Artsworld, £6
- Chelsea TV, £6
- Disney (Disney Channel, Playhouse Disney & Toon Disney), £5
- Film Four, £7
- MUTV, £6
- Music Choice Extra, £5
- Star TV (Star Plus & Star News), £12
- Television X, £7.99
- Sky Sports Xtra, £6

Free channels

All BBC channels are free-to-air on Astra 2D, including regional variations. If you subscribe to Sky, any ITV region can be added using the Add New Channels dialogue box in the Digibox's Services menu. There are currently over 40 FTA digital TV channels and more than 50 radio channels from Astra 2 and Eurobird which can be picked up using a Sky Digital system without a viewing card. For frequencies see Channel Check.

TV Choices

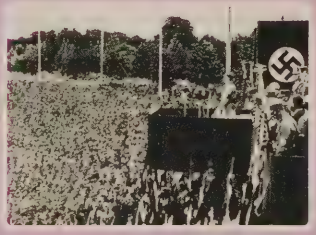
ANGEL

Sky One. 9pm
The 100th episode sees the return of a much-missed cast member who is a little bemused by all the changes. The rumoured appearance of Sarah Michelle Gellar this season has proved false, so don't expect Buffy to turn up.



THE NAZI BOMB

The History Channel, 5pm
During the Second World War, Germany led the world in atomic research, with many top scientists forced to work under the régime, but it never developed nuclear weapons. Did Werner Heisenberg deliberately mislead Hitler?

TV Choices

THE X-FILES

FX, 8pm

Pre-fame Jack Black and Giovanni Ribisi guest star. Mulder and Scully (David Duchovny and Gillian Anderson) investigate after a series of unexplained lightning-related deaths, and as usual Scully has an explanation for everything.

COLD CASE

Sky One, 10pm

One of producer Jerry Bruckheimer's big hits of last year (pretend Skin and Tarzan never happened – everyone else has). When a widow gets flashbacks of the night her husband died, Lily (Kathryn Morris) re-opens the old murder investigation.

THE NOVEL IDEAS LONG WEEKEND

Sky Movies, all weekend
Fellowship Of The Ring (pictured) is one of the many book-to-screen adaptations showing this weekend across Sky Movies. Others include Wuthering Heights, The World According To Garp and Harry Potter And The Philosopher's Stone.

I CAPTURE THE CASTLE

Front Row, every 120 minutes
Based on Dodie Smith's coming of age novel – allegedly JK Rowling's favourite book. It focuses on Cassandra Mortmain (Romola Garai) and her family, led by alcoholic father James (Bill Nighy), a novelist who can no longer write.

TV Choices

THE FEARLESS FOUR

Cartoon Network, 1pm

A group of animals form a musical group and head for Paris in search of fame and fortune. A wrong turn means they end up in sinister Bremen, ruled by the music-hating Dr Evil. Strangely appealing German animation.

MEN'S HEALTH TV

Bravo, 9pm

Apparently laddism is dead – the new big thing is metrosexuality. David Beckham is an example: well-groomed, straight, with no qualms about playing up to the Pink Pound. Terri Dwyer, Steve Jones and James Beatty present this one-off.

VIC AND BOB IN CATTERICK

BBC Three, 10.30pm

The six-part road movie continues as Carl and Chris (played by Vic Reeves and Bob Mortimer) encounter more freaks and weirdos – including Matt Lucas, Morwenna Banks, Reece Shearsmith, Julia T Wallace and Mark Benton.

JOHNNY VEGAS NIGHT

UK G2, 9pm

He's sweet, but Johnny Vegas's shtick isn't particularly variable. He's big, he seems to be fond of his beer and he has an endearing (almost certainly faux) naivété. Still, he's made it work. Watch him in Room 101 and Shooting Stars.

TV Choices

LIZZIE MCGUIRE

The Disney Channel, 5.30pm
Hilary Duff was the teenager of the moment in 2003, and it all began with this. She's guided by an animated conscience, but apart from this quirkiness the storylines are mostly your usual girl-meets-world shenanigans.

SMALLVILLE

E4, 9pm
Clark gains a power, and a new pair of glasses. Lex still isn't recovered from his traumatic experiences, but he provides plenty of sympathy. Meanwhile, Lana has a new love interest, played by Tom Welling-lookalike Ian Somerhalder.

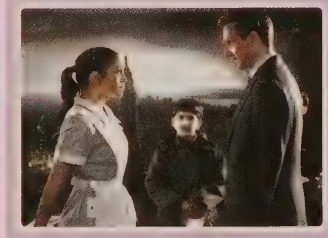
ROCK PROFILE

UK G2, 8pm

Matt Lucas and David Walliams were a cult success way before Little Britain. Jamie Theakston plays it straight as he interviews the pair disguised as a variety of pop stars. This episode they are George Michael and Andrew Ridgely.



MAID IN MANHATTAN

Sky Box Office, every 30 minutes

Jennifer Lopez stars in this romantic comedy about a maid who gets mistaken for a socialite. Ralph Fiennes is the handsome leading man (albeit slightly sinister, but that's not part of the plot). Not terribly funny, but sweet enough.

SKY ONE

TV Choices

JAKE 2.0

Sky One, 8pm

Jake 2.0 has been put on hiatus in the US, which could be very bad news indeed. Shame – it's a fun show with a lot of potential – and Christopher Gorham is an appealing lead. Let's hope it can be saved (along with Firefly and Farscape).

KNOWING ME, KNOWING YULE

UK G2, 11am

It's spring, so what better time to air the Alan Partridge Christmas Special? Watch it for Rebecca Front (Nighty Night) and Kevin Eldon (15 Storeys High), who is in drag as cheeky chef Fanny Thomas. Steve Coogan stars as Alan.

TV Choices

ANALYZE THAT

Front Row, every 150 minutes
Billy Crystal and Robert De Niro re-team for this sequel to Analyze This. Crystal is the analyst to De Niro's neurotic mobster. The original movie predates The Sopranos, but there's still no need for this (or that). Lisa Kudrow co-stars.

SIN CITIES UNCUT

Bravo, 10.30pm
If Sin Cities isn't gratuitous enough for you, here's a chance to see all the bits that were too naughty (or daft) to make it into the original cut of the show. Presenter Ashley Hames puts himself on the front line so you don't have to.

FRIENDS

E4, 9pm

Will Ross and Rachel get together this series or will she end up with Joey? Will Chandler and Monica end up with a child? And will Phoebe get married and live happily ever after? It's all become a bit too schmaltzy, hasn't it?

24

Sky One, 9pm

The real-time series continues, and the race to prevent an epidemic is getting even more frantic. Kiefer Sutherland stars as Jack Bauer, Dennis Haysbert is the president and DB Woodside (Principal Wood in Buffy) as his brother Wayne.

TV Choices

BULLETPROOF MONK

Front Row, every 60 minutes
Action hero Chow Yun Fat is better than this, but it's a good showcase for young comedian Seann William Scott (American Pie and Dude, Where's My Car?). The two team up to defeat the bad guys and see that justice is done.

THE ADVENTURES OF PLUTO NASH

Sky Movies 2, 8pm
This sci-fi comedy was one of the biggest box office failures in the history of cinema, but don't let that put you off. Eddie Murphy stars as the title character, owner of a nightclub on the moon. Randy Quaid and Joe Pantoliano co-star.

TV Choices

MURDER MOST HORRID

Plus, 9.30pm

Dawn French plays a variety of murderers and occasionally victims in this comic crime show, loosely a parody of Alfred Hitchcock Presents, Tales Of The Unexpected and the like. During the series she played 18 characters.

CHEATERS

Reality TV, 9pm

It's hard to know whether to sympathise or mock some of the people this show focuses on, or take sides with the cheater or the one being cheated on. It is, however, all to easy to think that they all deserve what they get.

TV Choices

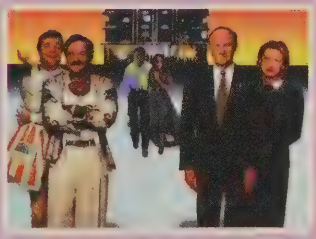
FAR FROM HEAVEN

Sky Box Office, every 60 minutes
Director Todd Haynes' homage to the films of Douglas Sirk. Julianne Moore stars as the perfect suburban housewife whose life is shattered when she discovers her husband (Dennis Quaid) in a compromising position.



THE BIRDCAGE/LA CAGE AUX FOLLES

Film Four, 10pm/1.35am
The US remake with Nathan Lane and Robin Williams OK, but not as funny as the French original starring Michel Serrault and Ugo Tognazzi. A rare chance to see both on the same night.

SPY KIDS 2

Sky Movies 1, 7pm
Sequel to the 2001 original. Alex Vega and Daryl Sabara return as the go-getting kids, and Carla Gugino and Antonio Banderas are still their Spy parents. Steve Buscemi is suitably odious as the villain this time round.

TV Choices

ALL THE QUEEN'S MEN

Sky Movies 2, 10.10pm
Eddie Izzard and Matt LeBlanc drag up and try to infiltrate a German bomb factory – and amazingly they get away with it. Takes itself a little too seriously but maybe that's part of the joke. Udo Kier and Edward Fox also star.

THE OFFICE

UK Gold, 11pm
Yet another chance to see Ricky Gervais as David Brent – only he's a multi-award-winning international superstar now. Martin Freeman, Mackenzie Crook and Lucy Davis are also doing well in the US.

Keene Electronics presents..

Scart cables like no other...

Keene Electronics new SyncBlaster cables give you the power to easily connect RGB scart equipment directly to Plasma and LCD screens, and projectors.

Most of these screens struggle to work with the paltry 0.3V sync provided from an ordinary RGB scart socket. Enter SyncBlaster. These fiendishly clever cables incorporate a fully functional sync separator and amplifier, providing the TTL level sync required for correct screen operation.

To avoid the need for yet another 'black box' we've managed to cram all the essential electronics inside the actual scart plug body.

Not only that, the cables can draw the required operating power directly from the scart socket (pin 8) so for most applications there's no additional power supply to worry about either!

Keene SyncBlaster – so useful it's almost scary.

SyncBlaster scart plug to 15 pin HD (SVGA) plug

Length	Order Code	Price
1.5m	SGB12	£69.99
3.0m	SGB13	£74.99
5.0m	SGB14	£79.99
10.0m	SGB15	£89.99

SyncBlaster scart plug to 5 BNC plugs (RGB plus Hsync &Vsync)

Length	Order Code	Price
1.5m	SGB22	£69.99
3.0m	SGB23	£74.99
5.0m	SGB24	£79.99
10.0m	SGB25	£89.99

STERLING CABLES Gold

SyncBlaster cables are not suitable for use with monitors designed solely for computer use (the screen must support a horizontal scan rate of 15.625KHz – most projectors, plasma and LCD panels do whereas most CRT monitors don't).

Exclusive to What Satellite & Digital TV readers! Three publications for satellite TV enthusiasts at a very special price

Digital Satellite TV

Evolved from the famous Ku-band Satellite TV series of books, this 486-page tome is crammed full of background information, and technical details on all aspects of satellite TV – both digital and analogue – with pretty much everything you need in the way of theory, installation and troubleshooting of satellite systems. An indispensable guide to satellite TV technology.

UK £36 • Rest of Europe £42 • Worldwide £47

Classic Black Book

The 'bible' of the black art of signal security, European Scrambling Systems is principally concerned with analogue scrambling systems, but is still of interest today to anyone interested in how scrambling and encryption systems are set up and knocked down by illicit 'hackers'. This 576-page book is packed with technical data, circuit diagrams, software listings, tables and photos with details on hacks of scrambling systems for PAL, Mac and the DirecTV DSS American digital network.

UK £34 • Rest of Europe £35 • Worldwide £39

SatMaps Footprints CD-Rom

On CD-Rom for both PC and Mac, SatMaps is a simple collection of satellite footprints – essential to work out which signals you can receive with your dish. Place the disc in your computer, double-click on an icon and away you go. Each footprint can be viewed, printed or downloaded for use in other software. From Afristar to Turksat, over 600 footprints of broadcast satellites around the world are here. SatMaps requires either Microsoft Internet Explorer or Netscape Communicator installed as the default internet application in your computer.

UK, Europe and Rest of World £29

Pomp and pageantry: Turkish news agency IHA agency displays the Afghan Grand Council's remarkable logo before the meetings go on air; meanwhile, the people of Louisiana celebrated the 200th anniversary of the Louisiana Purchase

New year, old troubles

ROGER BUNNEY SEARCHES THE SKIES EVERY MONTH FOR SIGHTINGS AND NEWS SNIPPETS FOR MOTORISED DISH ENTHUSIASTS

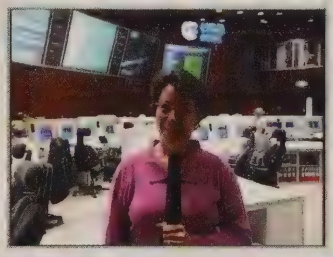
Christmas Day 2003 started with the usual round of religious ceremonies on satellite. Other than the usual Vatican ceremonies, many regional services are carried from distant churches. For example, Eutelsat W1, 10°E featured a morning carol concert from a German church into the ZDF network (via the satellite truck ZDF DSNG 2ZU (11.063GHz/V, SR 6109, FEC 5/6).

In the afternoon the South African Tellytrack racing service was airing an interesting montage of interviews with racing personalities and recordings of 2003's best races over its 11.497GHz/V (3253, 7/8) feeder over Europe*Star at 45°E (and trailing the Boxing Day races). On Boxing Day several UK race meetings were carried live over Tellytrack including Wincanton. One of our readers notes that FTA horse racing is carried some afternoons at 11.670GHz/H, 5632, 3/4, over the inclined IIF3 21°E from the French Equidia racing studio courtesy of SIS3C1. And Telstar-11, 37°W, also carried the gee-gees from the Irish Republic in December – a prime meeting from Shelbourne Park featured many races – 11.595GHz/V, 5632, 3/4.

At 5pm on Christmas Day afternoon APTN newsflashed a car suicide bombing in Tel Aviv, Israel, over its 10°E lease (10.973GHz/V). This was raw footage aired live as received in from a camera crew at the bus stop where the bomb exploded. It seems the APTN pictures were sourced from the RR sat truck uplinking from the bombing site via Eutelsat W2, 16°E (12.533GHz/H, 5632, 3/4) and identing 'R.R. SNG'. Pictures revealed the stark reality of a suicide bombing. An official carefully gathered human remains lying on the road surface; three covered shapes were the victims remains against the distorted bus stop shelter and a camera close-up showed human flesh hanging from the top of the bus shelter.

Iraq was rarely out of the news in December. The weekend of 13/14th saw the capture of Saddam Hussein – the Ace of Spades in the 'Iraqi Most Wanted Playing Cards' pack – an ironic card as he was found in a deep hole!

The satellite airwaves got hot that weekend with many live reports, two-ways and news updates. Alan Richards (Nottingham) reported that the Clarke Belt was full of feeds – a check on December 14 revealed three feeds on W2, five feeds on W1, four feeds on Eutelsat W3 7°E, and another on 1°W. Many locals were, of course, delighted that Saddam has been captured at last. It was interesting that as the CBS reporter waited to file an update from the Rimal Hotel (CBS has its news bureau and dish on the top floor) celebratory gunfire broke out below. The reporter hurried for her bullet-proof coat – the last time celebration fire echoed around Baghdad 70 locals were shot! CBS is running its uplink regularly over the Telecom band segment of Eutelsat W2, 16°E signing as 'SERVICE 1' or '523209' and usually on 12.525,12.540 or 12.548GHz/H (5632, 3/4). At times two paths have run simultaneously and generally with NTSC colour. (Occasionally, CBS NEWSPATH uses 11.192GHz/H for US affiliates' news items as a European distribution feeder so don't forget the lower Ku-band!)



Festive feeds: Bethlehem celebrates Christmas via Fox on Intelsat 902; Moscow rings in the New Year with Reuters TV on NSS-7; Living TV's Most Haunted feeding on W1, gets a little scary; and ESA Mars mission controllers put a brave face on the search for Britain's missing Beagle lander, also on W1

The outgoing Iraqi feeds pass into the CBS Bureau, London, for despatch (probably via fibre) into CBS New York. On New Year's Eve '523209' fired up its uplink, as did several other SNG units when a car bomb explosion at a restaurant in central Baghdad killed at least five Iraqi diners and injured several dozen other guests. A rapid turnaround of location recordings was played out to their respective networks within minutes. From the CBS/Rimal Hotel one could actually see smoke rising from the restaurant – the shot being left on circuit when not used for VT playouts.

Bam, a provincial Iranian city some 200 miles south-east of the capital,Tehran, was hit by a major earthquake that reduced most buildings to rubble.

On December 30/31videophone reports were being used in the national news but by New Year's Day at least two satellite uplinks were present in Bam, linking back over W1. UKI-511 Coder appeared at 11.108GHz/V (4199, ?) PAL, with reports and interviews in English covering the rescue operation. 'DEFAULT' was an NTSC feeder back to the US, running 10.980GHz/V (6109, 5/6). US interest in the Bam tragedy was high since an uneasy political situation has existed for about 30 years. Hopefully, this will thaw now Iran has received aid shipments.

The Bam tragedy also devastated the region and the 2,000-year-old Great Palace of Bam – a World Heritage site – built of mud.

Roy Carman (Dorking) noted W3, 7°E downlinking a German report from Bam on two frequencies (10.976, 10.986GHz/H, 6666, 7/8) and CDR'd images from that disaster.

The thaw across the Middle East further warmed in December when Libya's Colonel Gadaffi agreed to scrap his weapons of mass destruction and allow free inspection.

On Christmas Eve, Roy checked out activity to the east. Intelsat 906 at 64°E featured a medical report on Nephrotic Syndrome (11.462GHz/H, 2500, 3/4), courtesy of linker Taridan Scopus, and a carol service from Bethlehem on Intelsat 902 at 62°E (11.545GHz/H,3255, 3/4); this a Fox

Caught on camera: Wary Baghdad police following a restaurant bomb, from CBS on W2; US surveillance chopper catches smugglers dumping heroin from their dhow, also on W2; Serbia's nationalist-skewed election results are announced in Belgrade, via W1; Daring athletes take to the air at the Four Hills Ski Jumping Championships in Garmisch Partenkirchen, via W1

Feed for the European/American networks.

Most of news from Iraq has been bad, but Christmas Eve saw a surprise visitor to Baghdad – David Letterman, the talk show host. '523209" had seemingly been primed as it was on site when Mr Letterman appeared unannounced at a checkpoint. He was stopped by GIs and questioned, but when it became apparent that Letterman was their Christmas entertainment, he was greeted like a long-lost brother and escorted into the building. All good PR for the folks back home, courtesy of CBS News over its 16°E feed. And why the CNN NEWSOURCE lease over NSS-7, 21°W carried a locked-off camera shot of Los Angeles Christmas Eve traffic flow from the KLTA-TV building for over an hour is unknown.

There was more relaxing and exciting viewing over the Globecast bouquet on Telstar-12, 15°W with ice hockey (NY vs Philly) was back again on the North Atlantic path (11.014GHz/H, 20145, 3/4).

Alan awaited with excitement the launch of AMOS-2 on December 27, a live broadcast from Baikonour in Kazakhstan from 9.30pm GMT via Eutelsat W3, 7°E (11.283GHz/V, 27500, 3/4. 'Occa W3' showed the successful launch. Alan also monitored news feeds from Colombia after the backpacker hostages were released on Christmas Eve. PAS-9 at 58°W on the BT channel 4 lease transmitted footage at 11.477GHz/H (26463, ?) with the hostages thanking the Bogota priests and UK Embassy staff in Colombia. After the backpackers footage ended a second tape item covered the American mad cow problems! Service ID 'P9 1K-Adhoc C'.

Congratulations to Edmund Spicer (Littlehampton) has heard that the Telecom 2A sat at 5°W is carrying France 2 in FTA (12.635GHz/V (SR 6283, 7/8) but as of late December had failed to find the bird. Apparently is in an inclined 1.6° orbital drift. And while drifting in inclined mode the Eutelsat II F3, 21.5°E bird is really a 'Wanderin' Star' now, with reports that certain broadcasters are finding difficulty in maintaining lock during broadcasts – Lyngsat is ceasing carrying listings for this satellite such is the bird's drift.

Afghanistan was also in December's news. The 13/14 heralded the important Afghan Grand Council meetings in Kabul. A colony of large tents housed various officials with heavily armed guards around the whole area and in the hills surrounding the conference venue. The meetings were sufficiently important for APTN to wheel out their 'APTN AFGHANISTAN PATH-1' and '... PATH-2' uplinks over 10°E (10.958, 10.964GHz/V 4167, 5/6) for the period. (Both Pashto and Dari became the official languages of the country). More activity was noticed on January 1 with 'IHA AFGHANISTAN' on the 10°E distributor 10.967GHz/V, a large circular logo or test card carrying much local script within the circle remained on screen for a long period. IHA is a Turkish news agency.

New Year's Eve satellite TV was a happier day for content. NTV-RUS-6 on W2, 16°E at 12.548GHz/H (5632, 3/4) transmitted afternoon song and mini-skirted dance from Moscovites celebrating. How things have changed from the Iron Curtain entertainment of old.

There was snowy excitement in the Bavarian Alps with the Ski Springen championships; contestants skiing down ramps and springing into the sky to land safely hundreds of metres farther down the slopes against a Christmas card backdrop of pine trees, all courtesy of the RTL DSNG D219 satellite truck at 12.560GHz/H (SR11265, 3/4) on 16°E. Less happy that night was the crew on SISLink's SIS 9 UKI-717 near Princes Street, Edinburgh, covering the Royal Bank St Party. Extensive coverage had been planned for welcoming in 2004 with a firework display and concert, but the dreadful weather ended all entertainment. The crew and presenter toasted in 2004 and derigged (16°E, 12.563GHz/H).

The night crew of the BT TES-38 fared better down at a snowy York horse race track. UK Living had been running on three consecutive nights its Most Haunted programme – supernatural experiences communicating with those long-deceased. The final programme in the series ran to 3am and the medium under an umbrella in the darkness of York was shouting out the final words at the execution of a centuries-old highwayman! All very odd – but the 16:9 outside broadcast at least happened, linking over W1, 10°E, 11.099GHz/V (5632, 3/4). Generally, it was a bad night for outside broadcasters and satellite truck crews.

There was better weather for Most Haunted from December 29 onwards, when Roy Carman checked out its satellite operation in greater detail. Apart from our friend BT TES-38 (11.098GHz/V) as above, BT TES-10 also appeared (11.079GHz/V) – both TES over W1, 10°E together with 'Links 'n' Things', using the 1°W slot for Intelsat 707 at 11.942GHz/H (all 5632, 3/4). Full marks to UK Living for intensive use of facility companies and crews – as with Sky Sports and its extensive OB operation – the satellite channels have provided much work for freelancers, unlike terrestrial broadcasters, which appear to have cut back!

Eutelsat's SESAT bird slumbers out at 36°E and is rarely busy. Mid-afternoon on December 16 Azerbaijan TV popped up at 11.049GHz/H (SR2894, 3/4) with rather sombre live picture content, a gloomy cemetery with subtle lighting and a long procession of mourners filing past the grave of a past president, piled high with flowers. This outside broadcast seems unending with slow zooms in and out to sad mourners, the flowers, and back to mourners. A head-and-shoulders picture of the deceased is corner inlaid and at times is expanded to fill the screen.

Finally, a picture from Roy Carman shows the Mission Control Centre for the Mars Lunar landing of The Beagle. It landed somewhere but has yet to speak ■

ROGER BUNNEY is pleased to hear from readers with reports of interesting, rare or unlikely satellite sightings. WRITE with details (photos/video recordings gratefully accepted), where, when and with what equipment, to: Satellite Search, What Satellite & Digital TV, Highbury-WV, 53-79 Highgate Road, London NW5 1TW

COMPLETE GUIDE TO EURO DIGITAL CHANNELS

There are hundreds of satellite channels up there. Tune in with our monthly updated guide

Although the Astra craft at 19.2°E and 28.2°E are the highest profile satellites in the skies above the UK, there are many more providing TV channels. More than 40 provide thousands of digital stations, plus newsfeeds across Europe. This guide gives you all the details needed in order to tune in to them using fixed dish, dual-feed or multi-satellite systems.

For each satellite we have displayed the regular TV channels transmitted, plus the more dependable sources of news feeds. For each transponder (broadcasting frequency) we list the bouquet name, frequency and polarity, transponder number, encryption type, symbol rate and forward error correction (FEC) rate. These tuning details can either be manually entered into your receiver or are automatically found using some systems.

We also list two approximate minimum dish sizes for the South (London) and North (Edinburgh) to give you an idea of the strength of the signal. Remember that your own particular location, LNB type and even weather may also affect your ability to receive the channel. For each channel we show its name, a description, and main language.

■ All listings believed correct at the time of going to press. If you have a correction, e-mail it to us marked Channel Check or post it to us at the usual address.

EVERY MONTH, DR MATTHEW HOLBROOK KEEPS AN EAR TO THE SKIES FOR NEWS OF SATELLITE RADIO

The live radio channels on Sky Digital have proved to be stable again this month. The only change has been to the channels undergoing testing. Emap's Kiss 100, Smash! Hits Radio and Kerrang! Radio have left their slots on Astra 2B's 12.324GHz/V. These and five additional channels are now testing on Eurobird 1's 11.623GHz/H, SR 27500, FEC 2/3. The full line-up is Kiss 100 (A-PID 2333), Smash! Hits Radio (A-PID 2334), Kerrang! Radio (A-PID 2335), The Hits (A-PID 2336), Magic 105.4FM (A-PID 2335), Q Radio (A-PID 2338), Heat Radio (A-PID 2339) and Mojo Radio (A-PID 2340).

Over on Astra 1 at 19.2°E there is more evidence that Astra Digital Radio is in decline. This service pioneered the use of analogue transponders to carry digital audio but it only really took off in Germany. This month Power Radio has finished on 11.009GHz/V, subcarrier 7.74MHz, HR Skyline FM on 11.068GHz/V, subcarrier 7.74MHz and Radio Regenbogen on 11.186V, subcarrier 8.46MHz. Also, HR XXL has been replaced with You FM (www.youfm.de) on 11.068GHz/V, subcarrier 7.56MHz.

Still with ADR, Radio Bremen Vier (www.radiobremen.de/rb4) has moved from 11.068GHz/V, subcarrier 7.92MHz to 11.494GHz/H, subcarrier 8.10MHz. It takes over the slot used by NordwestRadio, which is now only available as a standard digital broadcast on 11.836GHz/H, SR 27500, FEC 3/4, A-PID 3801. The channel MDR Kultur on 11.112GHz/H, subcarrier 6.66MHz has been replaced by MDR Figaro (www.mdr.de/mdr-figaro). The same change has also occurred on standard digital audio, parameters 12.110GHz/H, SR 22000, FEC 5/6, A-PID 0801. The only other change on Astra 1 this month is new A-PIDs for Yorin FM (0223 to 0222) and Kink FM (0224 to 0220) on 12.574GHz/H, SR 22000, FEC 5/6.

Multiplicity: Emap makes ever more inroads into radio

On the Hot Bird satellites at 13°E Radio Citta Futura (www.radiocittafutura.it) is new on 12.149GHz/V, SR 27500, FEC 3/4, A-PID 0257. Radio Mir Medjugorje (www.medjugorje.hr/rmmhr.html) has started on 12.520GHz/V, SR 27500, FEC 3/4, A-PID 0041, time-sharing with Hrvatski Katolicki Radio (www.hkr.hr). Iza'at Al-Sharq Al-Awsat takes over from MagicStar on 12.539GHz/V, SR 27500, FEC 3/4, A-PID 1188. A1 has been replaced with Val 202 on 12.303GHz/V, SR 27500, FEC 3/4, A-PIDs 0255 and 251. ABC Tamil Oli has returned to 12.380GHz/V, SR 27500, FEC 3/4, A-PID 3533. And all the radio channels on 12.484GHz/V, SR 8830, FEC 3/4 have relocated to 12.226GHz/V, SR 12800, FEC 3/4 with same A-PIDs.

Two channels on 12.207GHz/H, SR 27500, FEC 3/4 have changed their A-PIDs – STN Radio from 2097 to 2099 and The Overcomer from 1025 to 2100. Radio Familia has left 11.200GHz/V and Radio Sumer has gone from 12.597GHz/V. Talk Radio and Rete Sport have vacated their slots on 12.092GHz/H but they continue to be available 12.149GHz/V, SR 27500, FEC 3/4 as well as on Eutelsat W2 at 16°E using 11.083GHz/H, SR 5210, FEC 5/6 (A-PIDs 0770 and 0772 respectively). On the same satellite Radio NRG has been added to the AlbaniaSat bouquet on 11.449GHz/H, SR 14000, FEC 3/4, A-PID 0231 ■

GUIDE TO RADIO CHANNELS

The radio channels guide is compiled by Jeff Millington. If you have any additions or comments to make, email him at jeff.millington@ukonline.co.uk

Satellite receivers spend most of their time tuned to TV but there is also an abundance of radio stations transmitted from the same satellites and receivable using the same equipment. There are three broadcasting formats for satellite radio – digital, analogue and Astra Digital Radio (ADR). Digital and analogue radio are receivable on digital and analogue (respectively) TV receivers, and ADR requires a special receiver and these are not widely available in the UK. ADR is only available on the Astra 1 satellites (please note that due to pressure on space ADR listings may not be included) ■

HOW TO BUY A SATELLITE TV SYSTEM

Choosing a satellite TV system is a confusing business. Here are a few guidelines to help out the first-time buyer

Buying a satellite TV system will involve you in a whole lot of choices, but you've made the right choice so far – to go for the wealth of entertainment available on satellite TV.

WHAT SYSTEM?

The first choice you must make is which type of satellite system to go for. It all depends on what you want to receive. Take a look in the Channel Check section of this magazine for an idea of which channels are broadcast from which satellites.

The cheapest and simplest satellite system uses a fixed dish to receive just the free channels from the Astra 1 satellites. This is what most people plump for – the ubiquitous 60cm dish (although an 80cm dish is needed in the north of England, the South-West, Scotland and Ireland). A Sky Digital system will not only receive the free and scrambled stations from Astra 2 and Eurobird at 28.2°E, it can also be used for free-to-air channels from some other satellites, with a suitable dish.

If you want to go the whole hog and receive all the channels that are available, you'll need a motorised multi-satellite system and think about receiving encrypted channels. These are more versatile, but also much more complicated and expensive than simple free-to-air systems.

Antennas come in a wide range of shapes and sizes, but you'll need a large dish for multi-satellite. A smaller dish is required for Sky Digital

WHAT MODEL?

In the following tables we list all the receivers currently available, separated into categories of fixed dish digital receivers, motorised digital receivers with traditional positioners built-in, and motorised receivers which use DiSEqC 1.2 software.

Mixed into all categories you'll find several combined receivers which can deal with both analogue and digital transmissions.

For each category and model there is a lot of information, much of which many buyers need not worry about. For a fixed dish digital receiver, look for plenty of channels, a Common Interface or built-in conditional access module, and DiSEqC 1.0 LNB switching.

If you want to receive channels on multiple satellites you'll need even more channels, but most importantly you'll need a built-in positioner or DiSEqC 1.2 software, depending on the type of motorisation you go for. One golden rule applies to any satellite system: don't rush out and buy the first model you see. Decide what you really need – both now and for the future – and consult this guide and your dealer for advice.

WHAT ABOUT INSTALLATION?

Whatever model you pick, the dish will have to be installed. You can do this yourself, but it's a task for the DIY-competent only.

Satellite receivers vary from the dirt cheap to all-singing, all-dancing models like the Echostar DVR7000, which has analogue and digital facilities, plus a hard disc drive for recording in digital quality

The installation must be done correctly if you're to receive the proper quality of pictures and sound.

A typical simple Astra installation will cost between £40 and £80 and will take a professional anything from 30 minutes to a couple of hours to install.

A multi-satellite installation is a far more complex task (and therefore much less suitable for trying yourself) and will cost you anything from £200 upwards.

WHAT TO ASK?

Unless you know a fair amount about satellite TV already, it's probably wise to buy your system from a dealer, rather than through mail order. Visit as many satellite dealers as you can, and try to see every possible system in use. Have a go yourself.

If you don't like the way a receiver operates, it's better to find out in the shop than in your lounge after you've bought the wrong model. Don't be afraid to ask questions. Ask about other models, why the system on offer is right for you and why it's better than the others available.

Check the price of the receiver and for the installation – some shops appear to offer a bargain on the equipment but cash in on the installation charges.

Make sure you are being offered the right size dish for your area – even though a 60cm dish may work all right in Penzance on a fine day, the picture will suffer when it rains.

If you intend to subscribe to any foreign channels, think about arranging it through the same dealer you buy your system from – you may qualify for a discount.

WHAT NEXT?

Once you've selected your satellite TV system and had it fitted, and the installer has shown you the basics, there's nothing more you have to do.

Watching satellite TV is then as easy as watching the five channels of terrestrial TV you're already used to.

The only difficulty then is choosing which of the tremendous choice of programmes to watch and fighting over who watches what.

Now perhaps you should think about a second receiver for the bedroom... ■

Key to fixed dish Sky Digital receivers

Known as the Sky Digibox, these receivers are the only way to pick up both the Sky subscription channels and channels from the BBC, ITV, Channel 4 and Five. All Sky Digiboxes have an integrated Videoguard conditional access module, and support the OpenTV software used for interactive TV and the electronic programme guide. The remote controls are interchangeable for all Digiboxes except Sky Plus, which has extra recording and playback controls

RECEIVER PRICE: Prices are for guidance only. Individual retailers may decide their own price, and What Satellite & Digital TV cannot be held responsible for market prices

MONTHLY SUBSCRIPTION: Sky Plus requires an extra monthly subscription to take advantage of its digital recording features

NUMBER OF LNB INPUTS: Two LNB inputs are useful for watching one channel while recording another, or receiving two different satellites without external switching

LNB LOOPTHROUGH: IF signal from dish can be passed to a second receiver while this unit is in standby

22KHZ SWITCHING: Universal-type LNBs are switched between high and low reception bands with a 22kHz tone from the receiver

POLARISER CONTROL: Polarisers are controlled by pulse (servo motor), current (magnetic), or voltage (combined LNB/polariser used in universal LNBs). Only current and pulse control allow skew adjustment for multi-satellite upgrading

SYMBOL RATE: The data rate varies from transponder to transponder, according to the level of compression and number of channels. Low symbol rates are used by news feeds with a single channel (SCPC or Single Channel Per Carrier), but most transponders on Astra, Eurobird and Hot Bird work on 22000 and 27500

FEC: Digital channels use differing Forward Error Correction rates (redundant information signals added to help receivers recognise and correct errors in transmission). Most receivers detect FEC automatically (A), but selectable FEC (S) can be useful for pinning down weak signals

HARD DISC SIZE: Measured in Gigabytes, this does not reflect recording capacity, which depends on the level of compression used for each recording

MODEM: Used to inform Sky of any Box Office events purchased, or for registering with some interactive services and downloading extra information. A faster modem will supply faster downloads.

NUMBER AV OUTPUTS: For direct connection via Scart cable to a TV or VCR for superior picture and sound

S-VIDEO OUTPUT: A dedicated S-video mini-DIN output connects to your TV or VCR for superior picture

STEREO AUDIO OUTPUTS: Phono sockets supplying left and right analogue audio channels, along with any Dolby Pro-Logic surround signals

DIGITAL AUDIO OUTPUT: For noise-free audio, either a coaxial link (c) or an optical link (O)

DOLBY DIGITAL: Receivers which can pass the AC-3 encoded signal via their digital audio output will produce superior Dolby Digital surround sound with a suitably-equipped audio amplifier

NUMBER UHF OUTPUTS: Extra outputs can be used to supply TVs in other rooms

UHF TUNING RANGE: Tuning the channel which a receiver 'broadcasts' to via the aerial lead. Larger ranges avoid crowding and interference between several receivers or VCRs

TESTED: Date of the What Satellite & Digital TV issue with a review of the receiver. Most will also be found in the following year's Book Of Tests

AUTO-SCAN: Set-top box will automatically scan full range of UHF frequencies from channels 21-69 for digital multiplexes

MANUAL SCAN: User can set a frequency to scan for a digital multiplex

EVENT TIMERS: Set-top box can be turned on to a given channel, to synchronise with VCRs

EPG: Uses the DVB electronic programme guide standard for now-and-next onscreen listings information

MHEG-5: Supports the software used by UK channels for digital text and other interactive TV services

SOFTWARE UPDATE: Changes in digital TV technology may require improved software, which can be supplied over the air (OTA) or via a serial cable from a PC (Serial)

PARENTAL LOCK: A four-digit PIN number can be used to control access to certain channels or the set-top box's control menus

Key to digital video recorders

The recording complement to digital TV, DVRs can store video, audio and data on a computer-type hard disc drive, which enables instant access, simultaneous read-and-write, and many other features a VCR can't emulate. DVRs can be combined with a digital satellite receiver, digital terrestrial TV tuner, analogue TV tuner, or even with DVD players/ recorders and VCRs. They're most useful in tandem with an electronic programme guide rather than a VCR-style manual timer – this is known as a personal video recorder, or PVR.

HARD DISC CAPACITY AND RECORDING QUALITY LEVELS: Increasing the level of data compression increases the amount which can be stored on the disc, but reduces picture and sound quality; Sky's compression system changes dynamically to maximise both compression and quality

MP3 PLAYBACK: Audio files or radio channels can be stored in a very small space using MP3 compression, so you can play back audio as well as video

BACKGROUND RECORDING: Watch from the hard disc while your DVR records live TV

LIVE TV CACHE: The DVR continually records (up to a fixed amount), so users can jump back fast to anywhere in the programme

PAUSE RECORDING: The DVR starts recording as soon as you press Pause

TWIN TUNERS: The DVR can record two channels at once or record one channel while another is being watched live

USB PORT: Transfers audio and video files to a PC, or vice-versa

ETHERNET: Connects to a home network or broadband internet

PACE TWIN DIGITAL RECEIVER – £349

A combined personal video recorder (PVR) and digital terrestrial receiver, the Pace Twin is the first of its kind. Twin digital tuners mean you can record one Freeview channel while watching another and the modest 20GB hard disc can store around 10 hours of TV and radio. Recordings can be scheduled using either the EPG or manual timer option and, as with most PVRs, there's also a pause live TV option. Recordings can be rewound and fast-forwarded up to 64 times and, if need be, archived to videotape if you're in danger of maxing out the hard drive. Picture and sound quality are both excellent and a recent software update added support for interactive and digital text services.

FIXED DISH DIGITAL RECEIVERS

FIXED DISH DIGITAL RECEIVERS

Key to fixed dish digital receivers

This category lists digital receivers used for receiving MPEG-2 channels. To watch such channels you require a DVB-compliant system instead of a conventional analogue receiver.

You will also need a dish pointed at one of the satellites broadcasting digital channels (see Channel Check for details) and a universal LNB to receive the high frequencies which digital channels normally use. Digital technology typically presents higher quality pictures and sound comparable to CD quality. Also, due to the nature of compressed digital TV signals, other facilities such as electronic programme guides, audio subchannels and teletext can be offered. While every digital receiver is capable of receiving these signals, it requires both a CAM and viewing card to decrypt scrambled pay-TV channels. Some receivers feature a Common Interface to enable a number of CAMs to be inserted for viewing of a number of different digital bouquets. Digital receivers can be linked to your existing analogue system for ease of use. This can be done using either a twin-output LNB, a priority switching system or a special IF splitter. In the future, interactive services such as home shopping, educational facilities, the Internet and e-mail will also be offered – depending on the compatibility of your receiver and the broadcaster involved.

KEY: A blob in a feature column indicates that the receiver has this feature. Some adjustments are V (variable – they can take any value within a range), S (switchable – they take one of a number of discrete values) or F (fixed – they cannot be altered). Many of the column headings are the same as for the analogue receivers. The additional column headings are explained here.

COMBINED ANALOGUE: Some receivers integrate analogue and digital reception in one box. Digital features are listed under Fixed Dish Analogue Receivers

RECEIVER PRICE: Digital receivers are typically sold without a dish because it is assumed that buyers already have an antenna for analogue TV reception

DISEQC: This facility enables you to control several LNBs (or dishes) from one LNB input. It's ideal for buyers planning to watch digital channels from more than one satellite. The version indicates how many can be connected. Version 1.0 allows up to four, 1.1 allows up to eight

SCPC COMPATIBLE: Some digital channels use a whole transponder's capacity, known as Single Channel Per Carrier, and your digital receiver should ideally have this facility

CAM: The Conditional Access Module provides the crucial conditional access technology required to decode the scrambled signals broadcast by the service provider. The modular approach ensures that the cost of upgrades will be reduced and that the receiver will keep pace with advances in CA technology

NUMBER CARD SLOTS: In addition to a CAM, digital receivers require a suitable DVB viewing card to be inserted before viewing encrypted digital channels

COMMON INTERFACE: A slot that enables a Common Interface module (similar in looks to a PC card) to be inserted in some receivers. Such a slot is desirable as it enables the separation of the proprietary CA technology from the receiver

EPG: Some receivers have access to an electronic programme guide that enables the latest channel listings and programme info to be seen onscreen. EPGs are broadcast as part of the MPEG-2 signal

TELETEXT: You don't need a TV equipped with teletext to access text from digital channels. The teletext signal is broadcast within the MPEG-2 data stream. If the receiver has a text option you should be able to access it

R232 INTERFACE: Links a computer printer or other peripherals to the receiver. May not be operational; available for future services

MODEM OUTPUT: Used to attach a phone modem for accessing interactive services

OPEN TV: Interactive software used by channels in France and Germany

SCSI OUTPUT: High-speed data interface for linking a CD-Rom, CD-player and video CDs in the future

UHF TUNING RANGE: Some digital receivers do not have a UHF modulator (and therefore no tuning range) because the manufacturers consider that using UHF leads is inferior to Scart connections

Key to digital satellite PC cards

These cards can also be used for multimedia-via-satellite, which includes high-speed downloads and 'streaming' video and audio, which can be watched on a computer using appropriate media player software, as well as the ability to surf the Internet at speeds higher than a normal telephone link.

KEY: A blob in the feature column indicates that the receiver has this feature. Some adjustments are V (variable – they can take any value within a range), S (selectable – they take one of a number of discrete values), F (fixed – they cannot be altered) or A (automatic – the receiver detects the correct value). Many of the column headings are the same as for analogue and digital receivers. The additional column headings are explained here.

MAXIMUM RESOLUTION: The greatest resolution at which the card can produce a picture in a window. This is defined as a number of pixels wide, by a number of pixels high. The size this appears onscreen will depend on the resolution at which your monitor operates.

FULL SCREEN VIEWING: Most cards can stretch the maximum resolution picture to fill a larger screen, either by interpolating the missing lines or by spreading the original pixels over a block of several pixels on the monitor. Both of these methods reduce clarity at the expense of a larger picture.

INTERNET-VIA-SATELLITE: A worthwhile satellite receiver card should be compatible with consumer high speed Internet-by-satellite services such as Europe Online, unless it is intended for use with other satellite data services.

VIDEO OUTPUTS: By attaching a TV to an external analogue video output, a larger picture can be obtained from the card without the loss of clarity by expanding to the fill your computer monitor.
Also allows satellite TV programmes to be recorded on a normal VCR. PC cards will have either a composite video phono output socket, or a high quality S-video output.

INTERNAL AUDIO CONNECTOR: Connecting your satellite receiver card to your sound card internally is neater, offers higher quality sound, and keeps the line-in port of your soundcard free.

RECORD TO HARD DISC: Software can capture still images from TV, or record in MPEG2 to the PCs hard disc drive

MAC ADDRESSING: Individual MAC addresses are widely used to verify subscriptions to internet and multimedia-by-satellite services and address information

AV INPUTS: With composite video or S-video inputs, your satellite card can be used to watch signals from an external DVD player, VCR, or you can use a videosender to send Sky Digital from the living room to the PC in your home office.

MINIMUM PC PROCESSOR: The slowest Pentium processor recommended for reliable use, in MHz

MINIMUM PC RAM: The minimum memory capacity (in MB) for running under Windows 98, usually double under Windows 2000 and XP

DIGITAL DiSEqC 1.2 RECEIVERS

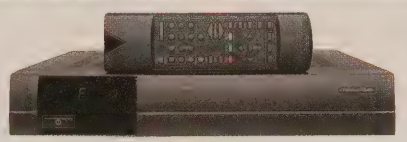
Recommended

SKY DIGITAL

SKY PLUS £199

The ultimate Sky Digibox – at least for now – Sky Plus slickly combines an excellent Pace digital satellite receiver with a cutting edge personal video recorder. The Sky EPG and many interactive services run fast enough to be a pleasure rather than a chore, but you'll have to pay an extra £10 monthly subscription for the PVR features, on top of your Sky subscription (but not if you subscribe to more than two premium channels).

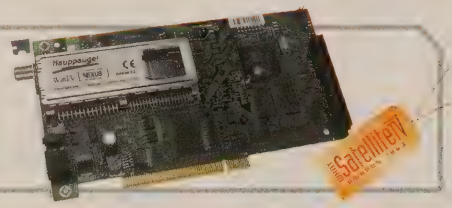
FIXED DIGITAL



TECHNISAT TECHNIBOX CAM1 PLUS – £199

High-quality German receiver with twin common interface and Dolby Digital audio support. User interface is very straightforward, but flexible enough for enthusiasts' needs, while picture quality and sound quality are excellent. The UHF output isn't UK-compatible, but it would insult this receiver to use anything other than Scart.

SATELLITE PC CARD



HAUPPAUGE WinTV NEXUS-S – £199

The successor to the Win TV DVB-S offers fewer connections but enhanced performance and features. Picture quality is great and it has most features you'd expect from a standalone satellite receiver, and easy-to-use software for internet-via-satellite and streaming media services. It can also turn your PC into a PVR as it can pause live TV and make scheduled recordings. Unlike many PC TV cards, its onboard MPEG processor means it won't hog too much of the system doing it.

Key to DiSEqC 1.2 digital receivers

Many new receivers use Eutelsat's DiSEqC software system to offer a cheap and easy route to a motor-ised dish which can point at different parts of the sky. DiSEqC 1.2 receivers send signals and power along the LNB cable to an 'intelligent' motorised dish mount which is programmed with the satellite positions. Because the cable is carrying control signals and the IF satellite feed from the LNB, the power it can supply without causing interference limits dish size to one metre. However, interfaces are available for larger dishes which interpret the DiSEqC signals for a traditional motorised mount.

KEY: A blob in a feature column indicates that the receiver has this feature. Some adjustments are V (variable – they can take any value within a range), S (switchable – they take one of a number of discrete values), F (fixed – they cannot be altered), or A (automatic)

Many of the column headings are the same as for the analogue and digital fixed dish receivers. The additional column headings are explained here

COMBINED DIGITAL: Some receivers integrate analogue and digital reception in one box. Digital features are listed under the neighbouring table

DISEQC LEVEL: Versions 1.2 provides simple positioning and movement limits. USALS enables receiver to automatically calculate satellite positions. Satscan is competing but similar technology used by Nokia

NUMBER OF SATELLITE POSITIONS: The more the better. Standard DiSEqC 1.2 allows for up to 50 positions, but this is limited by some software.

Key to motorised digital/analogue receivers

To view the programmes from more than one satellite, a motorised dish system is required. This includes a dish able to point at the different parts of the sky where the satellites are situated, and a positioner unit to control the dish motor The range of formats and standards on all the satellites is enormous, so multi-satellite systems must be flexible.

KEY: A blob in a feature column indicates that the receiver has this feature. Some adjustments are V (variable – they can take any value within a range), S (switchable – they take one of a number of discrete values) or F (fixed – they cannot be altered). Some of the column headings are the same as for the analogue and digital fixed dish receivers.

The additional column headings are explained here.

MAKE & MODEL: The models listed are all systems with integrated positioners which are capable of moving automatically to a new satellite on a channel change.

RECEIVER PRICE: The price of the receiver on its own without dish, LNB, mount and so on.

NUMBER OF SATELLITE POSITIONS: Not all receivers can pick up as many satellite positions as are needed for receiving 'everything'. The more the merrier.

VIDEO BANDWIDTH: Reducing the video bandwidth can reduce sparklies on weak signals, although some loss of picture quality is inevitable.

EXTERNAL SWITCH OUTPUT: Programmable 5V or 12V output to trigger an external LNB switch or other equipment.

OPTICAL ACTUATOR DRIVE: Dish actuators using an optional switch for feedback require a continuous 5V supply.

ECHOSTAR DVR-7000 – £900

Not just a very flexible motorised analogue and digital receiver, but a personal video recorder and MP3 player, the DVR-7000 is the first luxury receiver we've seen in some years. It can store 4,700 channels across 100 positions, with automatic satellite locating and searching. Programme information is stored on the 40Gb hard drive, along with around 12 hours of video and hundreds of MP3 files. There's also a twin Common Interface and a Viaccess CAM to enjoy the high-quality audio-visual performance on any channel.

MANHATTAN STARLIGHT 6800 – £299

A high-end motorised receiver needs lots of features to merit the outlay, and the 6800 has them. One of most advanced, easy-to-use receivers we've come across, the 6800 has a twin CI and an integrated CAM, built-in Teletext viewer, timers, S-video and RGB outputs, and digital audio outputs. It's fully motorised for both 36V users or DiSEqC motors and has a capable auto-locating system for traditional actuators as well as the full range of DiSEqC and USALS features. There's memory for 5,000 channels and channel lists can be edited.

FORCE D-MASTER 1145S – £295

The 1145S replaces the highly regarded 1122S. The sleek design is largely unchanged, and it features twin CI slots along with Viaccess and Seca CAMs. The 1145S can auto-locate satellites when used in conjunction with a DiSEqC motor and is preset for use with a four-way DiSEqC switch expandable to two-level DiSEqC 1.1 for use with up to 16 fixed LNBs. There's memory for 3,000 channels and 50 satellites and a symbol rate range of 2,000-45,000. An excellent revision of an old classic.

YOUR GUIDE TO LOCAL CAI QUALIFIED SATELLITE INSTALLER

You've bought your new satellite and now you want to install it. Who do you go to? Look no further than your local CAI installer.
The CAI (Confederation of Aerial Industries Limited) is THE recognised trade body for the aerial and satellite industry. The CAI is committed to raising standards within the industry and whilst the criteria for membership is extremely high, the consurer is assured of A QUALITY INSTALLATION AT A FAIR PRICE.

What is so special about a member of the CAI?

* CAI Members only employ qualified personnel whose work is monitored by an inspector.
* All CAI Members are required to work to the exacting standards laid down in the CAI's Codes of Practice.
* All CAI Members guarantee their installations for a minimum of twelve months. In addition, the CAI undertakes to back-up this guarantee with its own twelve months guarantee, for domestic installations only.
* CAI Members should carry identity cards that clearly state their name and company details together with a photograph.
* All CAI Members are required to have full insurance cover. This gives the consumer total peace of mind before the work commences.
* If a customer is unhappy with any aspect of the installation, the CAI has a formal complaints procedure.

Motorised Systems

The 15 Kg 1224 Supermount

(We can program a receiver for you) (1.5 magic CAMs at only £79.95 avail. with systems)

Advice. Our systems from Technomate & Echostar include internal 36 volt positioners and heavy duty "bolt-on" motors. (Or a V Box is included with the Xtreme.) This avoids the use of lightweight universal fit (i.e does not fit anything properley) diseqc motors. All our dish motors are 36V and up to 5A.)

Here are a number of examples from our web site.

Technomate CIP, Triax 78cm, Triax motor, LNB £319.95
Technomate CIP, Funke 98cm alloy, H to H motor, LNB £379.95

The Motorised Satellite Video Volume 1
This video is packed full of easy to understand information. Including comparing the capabilities of dishes from 80cms to 1.8m, comparing polar mounts with horizon to horizon motors, we demonstrate a simple method for fitting & setting up a motorised system, budget, mid priced & top end systems, receiver programming, tools & products, digital receivers, how to recognise well engineered products, Suitable for beginners but we take you to an advanced level. We explain the terminology & the Physics.

The Motorised Satellite Video Volume 2 Running time 2 hrs. 20 mins. £14.95 Free UK Del.
Including fine tuning the satellite arc, get the most out of your system, C Band equipment & programs, Indian & Middle Eastern channels, we visit "What Satellite" More tools, fault finding. Spectrum Analysers. Digital uplinking. We go live on 1W. Systems in flats, multiple receivers from 1 dish, system visits, and much more.

The Motorised Satellite Video Volume 3 Running time 2 hrs. 20 mins. £14.95 Free UK Del.
We talk to many manufactures and see dozens of new products. Including Nokia. Triax. Channel Master. Humax. RSD. Hirschmann. Cambridge. Unicom and many more. All of the latest digital products included. High efficiency dishes. Setting up a horizon to horizon motor. The 1224 Supermount. The Jumbo H to H motor for 1.8m plus dishes. Installing a Jumbo on a Channel Master 1.8m. Test instruments, Inexpensive satellite meters & inclinometers reviewed. Internet via satellite. Vol. 3 is a continuation of Vol. 1& 2 The 3 videos form a complete series. Once again the presenter considers technical subjects & explains them in "plain English".
(Paying by cheque? Videos should be payable to "AVS." All other goods "Visiondotcom Ltd.")

Better Satellite Reviews The Motorised Satellite Videos
"They'r crammed full of technical info. - all explained in easy to understand terms". - and reffering to the videos. Costs will quickly be recouped if the advice is followed.
Customers Comments. I have just watched my copy of the Vol. 1 All I can say is SUPERB ! The narrator is interesting and obviously speaks with knowledge and competence. / I would like to take this opportunity to thank you for the video. It's about time someone expelled the "myths & mysteries of satellite tv & explains them in plain English./ Wish I'd bought the videos before I bought the system. / The Vol. 1 video has saved me loads of money ...

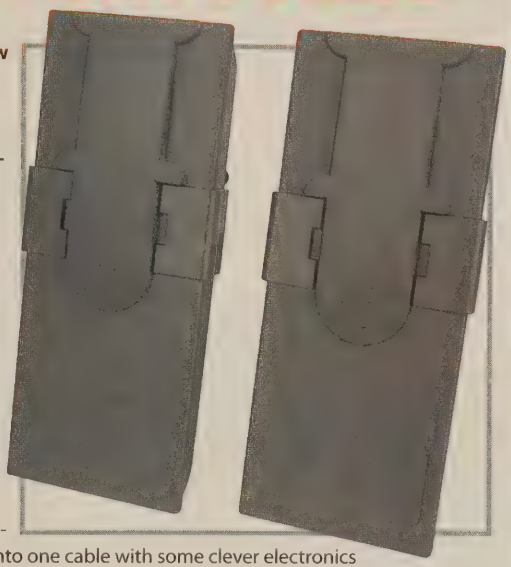
STACKING FOR SUCCESS

Could you please let me know if it possible to replace Sky with Sky Plus without running extra cables. I heard it is possible through a stacker/destacker system. If so, what do I need to purchase?
– CHARLES TANNENBAUM, BY E-MAIL



Sky Plus requires two independently controllable LNBs to operate properly (it has two tuners to allow it to record one channel while your watching another). Usually, these are supplied by a quad-output LNB with two outputs feeding the two tuners through separate cables (the other two outputs are spares).

A Johansson Stacker/Destacker system combines the two LNB outputs onto one cable with some clever electronics to multiplex the separate 13/18V and 0/22kHz control signals on the one cable too. The system can work extremely well and alleviates the need to run a second cable (you do still need to replace your LNB with a quad or twin-output model).

The problem is that combining the two LNB outputs on to one cable produces a signal with a bandwidth (about 3.5GHz) well beyond what the cable is designed to efficiently carry, so sometimes it doesn't work.

Whether you wish to try out the system, with the proviso that you may have to lay that second cable after all, is entirely up to you.

SPANISH DISH SIZE

I have a Technisat Digicom 1A VA satellite receiver with a 1.2m dish in southern Spain (just north of Gibraltar) which I use to receive German programmes from Astra 1B. Can this setup be used to receive the FTA BBC programmes from Astra 2D by using a second LNB? If so, would it be better to realign the dish on to Astra 2D and use the offset LNB for Astra 1B where the signal is stronger?
– TERRY SALTER, SPAIN

You may just be able to get away with a 1.2m dish for Astra 2D as there is a pocket of strong signal over Gibraltar. Otherwise, you will need a dish of 1.5m or maybe even larger. Either way, you should point the dish at Astra 2D and use a secondary, offset LNB for Astra 1.

THE OTHER ASTRA

Can you tell me if it is possible to receive German language channels through my Sky box? If not, how can I get these channels? I know they are available over the Astra satellite
– RAYMOND O'HORA, ISLEWORTH

There's only one true German channel at 28°E (K-TV) and a smattering of multilingual ones that include German. Unfortunately, K-TV is a SCPC

Most German channels are on Astra 1, not Astra 2/Eurobird

(single channel per carrier) broadcast and the Digibox cannot use its 2200 symbol rate signal.

You can receive German channels on your Digibox by connecting it to a suitable sized dish pointed at another satellite (Astra 1 or Hot Bird are both plentiful sources of Teutonic channels) but if you're going that far, we'd suggest you invest in another digital receiver, better suited to the job of picking up non-Sky channels.

TERRAIN TRAUMA

I live south of Guildford on a wooded hillside facing west and have line of sight to satellites from slightly east of south round to about north, although trees could affect reception near these two extremes.

I initially had a satisfactory installation with the original British Sky Broadcasting from, I think, the Marcopolo satellite. When they were taken over by Sky I could just about get a signal from the old analogue Astra satellite. Except on some wet windy nights in summer when leaves on trees caused some interference I enjoyed a satisfactory service, and I especially enjoyed Sky Sports.

When analogue was gradually switched off I was told twice by Sky installers that I couldn't receive Sky Digital transmissions because the new satellite is farther east. I think they got a slight signal but it is probably just about behind the hillside to the South and definitely affected by the trees.

I have also been told that digital terrestrial TV cannot be received in my area, and there is no cable nearby.

My old analogue dish is above the ridge of the house on the end of a scaffold tube but had to be fixed fairly near the eaves to be as far west as possible which limited the height. I was told by a specialist that Sky Sports is only transmitted from a satellite too far east for me to get line of sight.

Use a quad-output LNB to run multiple Digiboxes

I have put up with the basic four channels for the past few years but could you please advise if there is some way I can get decent sports coverage, eg Sky Sports, UK sport, European sport, Australian sport, US sport, Fox Sport etc and maybe more choice of films and world news.

Can I get some impressive kit that can pick up the above, and maybe digital terrestrial as well? Can the dish be fixed to a fairly substantial tree? Would it help if it were motorised?
– GEORGE MARKLAND, GUILDFORD

'I HAVE PUT UP WITH THE BASIC FOUR CHANNELS FOR THE PAST FEW YEARS BUT COULD YOU PLEASE ADVISE IF THERE IS SOME WAY I CAN GET DECENT SPORTS COVERAGE'

As you have said, at 28°E Astra 2 and Eurobird 1, from which Sky Digital is broadcast, are farther east than either Astra 1 (19.2°E) or Marcopolo (31°W). The Sky Digital channels are not (for the most part) available from any other satellite, so you need to get a view of 28°E. A motorised dish will not help at all.

Without seeing the lie of the land, it's not possible to say with certainty how you can achieve this but you should consult an experienced and specialist satellite installer, not the Sky Digital installers who are used to just run-of-the-mill cases.

You may be better off fixing the dish farther east to get it higher on your roof. You may be able to fix a very tall pole (with dish on top) to your house to see over the hill. You may be able to install the dish on the ground (or on a tall pole) sufficiently west of the house to clear the hill.

It's (almost) certainly possible to get reception. It's just a matter of experienced lateral thinking, and stumping up the cash for what will probably be a complex installation.

A QUESTION OF SPORTS

I have two satellite boxes – one receiving all Welsh signals, the other receiving Sky Sports. I want both boxes to run off a single satellite dish – cable is all in place. How can I do this?
–DAI RICHARDS, BY E-MAIL

If it's a Sky minidish that you're using, fit a quad-output LNB and an extra cable from it to the second box. If it's a standard dish you can fit a twin-output LNB and second cable.

BAD COMPANY

After installing a motorised system consisting of a 1m dish and Force D-Master 1144S receiver with a Pace Sky Minibox 1000 so that I could have the best of both systems, I now find that I am unable to watch them unless I remove the feed from the dish and choose to connect to which system to watch.

I thought that the Force receiver had a LNB loopthrough which when I connected the Minibox to, I could watch either. The Minibox did not work from the loopthrough but worked fine with main satellite cable connected. After reading the Force manual I find that this loopthrough is for an analogue receiver!

To watch either system I now have to disconnect from one to connect to the other, ensuring that the dish is positioned to 28.2°E, which is needless to say most inconvenient.

Can you advise me if there is some sort of switching device available to allow me to watch both from the same dish?
– ALLAN FERRANS, SCOTLAND

Whether you connect a digital or analogue receiver to an LNB loopthrough makes no difference. The problem is that with the Force receiver controlling the polarity and the frequency band coming down the cable from the LNB, the Digibox has to put up with whatever it gets – and it's rarely what it wants.

Some receivers pass on complete control to the loopthrough when in standby, and you can achieve a similar result with a Smart Priority switch from Global Communications. This detects whether the 'master' receiver is on or not (by looking for the LNB power supply on the LNB cable) and switches the LNB connection accordingly to either the master or secondary receiver.

The only solution, for simultaneous viewing is to use a twin-output LNB so the two receivers each have full control all the time. Even then, the Force receiver will want to move the dish to other satellites and the Digibox will then lose its signal.

TURNING FROM TPS

We have just bought a house in France that has a Thomson Digibox, with a 65cm dish and a universal LNB attached. The system is presently under contract to TPS.

Can I alter the dish elevation and use the present system for free-to-air on the Astra satellite? At present, the system only receives French programmes. English residents nearby are able to pick up free-to-air channels.
– PETER GREEN, NORMANDY

Almost undoubtedly, the TPS receiver can be used to receive FTA channels on Astra (Astra 2 is presumably what you want). The dish will be sufficient for this too. However, you should make sure that this receiver is owned and not leased from TPS. If it is a rental box then you would be better off returning it and buying a cheap FTA receiver. This may be the option that's more convenient in use too.

TIME TO LET GO

I have a Pace MSS1000 Dolby Pro-Logic analogue satellite receiver. Is there still a use for it as a receiver or as a Pro-Logic amplifier?
– L PARKES, BRIERLEY HILL, WEST MIDLANDS

The MSS1000 was a top-notch receiver in its day, but that day sadly passed long ago. There are still some analogue channels broadcasting so it could still be used for its original purpose. You could also use it as a positioner for a (fixed dish) digital receiver.

With two auxiliary Scart inputs, the MSS1000 could indeed be used as a Pro-Logic amplifier but to be honest, with a only a couple of watts power on each audio channel and Pro-Logic decoding, rather than Dolby Digital, it is far from state of the art for today.

The LNB loopthrough should take control to a second receiver when in standby

NOT SUCH A LIDL BARGAIN

I recently bought a satellite system before reading your magazine.

I enclose a list of satellites that have been pre-programmed into my receiver. In your satellite guide you show one frequency with a list of programmes listed on this frequency – eg Astra at 28.2°E 10.773 and then nine BBC programmes listed on this one frequency (channel). I have no knowledge of satellites and the jargon is foreign to me. How can you tune into each of the nine programmes?

My system includes 30m of cable, 80cm dish with fittings, LNB and receiver box costing a total of £39.90 (from Lidl). The specification is: model SR1902VC, LNB universal Ku-band inputs 800-2150<Hz 55dB gain, 999 programme locations, H/V toggle 14/18V, switching frequency 22kHz, DiSEqC 1.0, sound carrier 5.0-9.0 free programmable, audio mono/stereo with sound IC (Wegener-Panda system), Scarts 1xTV 1xVCR, remote infrared control.

I have installed my dish but originally thought that 10°E was 10° clockwise from east but now know that would be 80°E. I have not yet received any signals. I have sent for an instructional video from one of your advertisers to increase my knowledge

– JOHN MURRAY, POOLE

The Pace MRX1000 is no longer stocked despite for pleasing sound

Where to start? Channel Check (page 156) correctly gives nine BBC channels (not programmes) broadcasting from one frequency.

These are digital TV channels compressed and multiplexed (combined) into one transmission. Any digital receiver can separate them out and display the one required.

However, what you have bought from Lidl is an analogue receiver. Analogue transmissions do indeed occupy a 'whole' frequency each and cannot be received with a digital receiver, or vice versa.

Then there's the dish alignment. 10°E means a satellite positioned over the Equator at a longitude of 10° east of due South. The compass bearing to the satellite varies depending on the location of the dish site (if the dish site was at a longitude of 10°E then the satellite would be due South).

However, as luck would have it, from your location (2°E, 50.7N) the bearing to the satellite is indeed almost exactly 10°E of South.

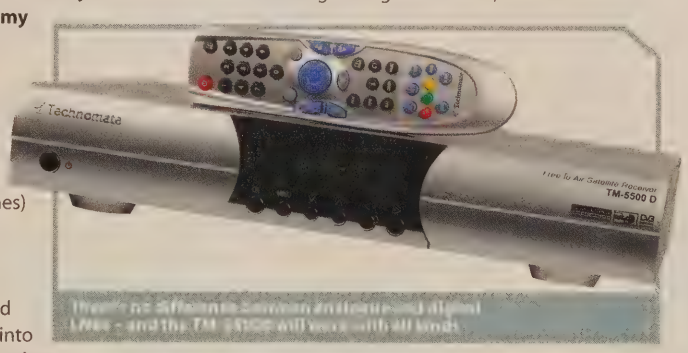
You haven't mentioned anything about elevation. The angle up to the satellite varies with your location too.

For a 10°E satellite from your home the elevation is a touch under 31°.

Given that the satellite is 38,500km away from the dish, you will appreciate that you need to aim the dish extremely accurately – more accurately than aiming with a compass in hand. You will need a signal level meter to aim the dish exactly to the satellite.

There is one analogue channel on 10°E (Eutelsat W1) but you will find far more on Astra at 19.2°E or Hot Bird at 13°E, as the channel list supplied with your receiver shows.

Unless you really want to chase the few remaining analogue channels, the best advice is probably to chalk up this one to experience.



There's no difference between analogue and digital LNBs – and the TM-5500 will work with all kinds

The dish and LNB (and probably the cable) sound OK, so hang on to them, but use the receiver as a high-tech doorstop. Invest in a digital receiver and professional installation (for whichever satellite you really want the channels from).

DISHING UP DIGITAL

I have recently purchased a Technomate 5500 as I have restarted satellite reception.

I have purchased a new minidish and a larger 80cm dish.

But as I have a number of old 60cm dishes, I wondered if those can be used with digital LNBs. Digital dishes appear to have a different focal point in relation to old 60cm dishes

– B HOUSLEY, MILTON KEYNES

There are no digital LNBs or digital dishes. Dishes and LNBs receive satellite signals regardless of whether they contain digital or analogue data.

The Sky Digital dish has a different F/D (focal length/diameter) ratio to your old 60cm dishes. The 80cm dish (almost certainly) has the same F/D ratio as the 60cm dishes. More importantly, the minidish LNB has a feedhorn designed for the wider-than-tall shape of the minidish and you cannot exchange LNBs between this dish and a 'normal' 60cm dish or the 80cm one (and the fitting is completely different too).

If you have universal type LNBs on the old 60cm dishes and they're in reasonable condition, then you can use these antennas, complete, for digital reception ■

'THERE IS ONE ANALOGUE CHANNEL ON 10°E (EUTELSAT W1) BUT YOU WILL FIND FAR MORE ON ASTRA AT 19.2°E OR HOT BIRD AT 13°E, AS THE CHANNEL LIST SUPPLIED WITH YOUR RECEIVER SHOWS'

Watch out for Lidl's analogue satellite systems (though they're a good way to get a cheap dish and LNB)

WIN a Quali-TV high-definition satellite TV receiver

There's no doubt here at What Satellite & Digital TV that high-definition TV will be the next big thing in home entertainment. Anyone who's seen these lifelike pictures displayed on a big-screen TV or projector can't fail to be impressed, as both analogue and digital PAL TV are relegated to the same league as VHS and internet streaming.

America and Japan have gone full speed into the HDTV revolution, but in Europe a new channel, Euro1080, is bravely flying the flag to convince broadcasters like Sky and the BBC to invest in HDTV, with two channels on Astra 1 at 19.2°E.

Clubs and cinemas will be able to tune into special live broadcasts on the Euro1080 Event Channel, but anyone can tune into the Main Channel, which will show four hours of new hi-def material every night, plus repeats around the clock. The Main Channel will be free-to-air until May, when it will be encrypted in Irdeto, and there'll be a one-off fee of around £100 to get a viewing card.

Euro1080 is owned by Alfacam, one of Europe's biggest outside broadcast TV companies, with access to a huge library of arts and sporting events recorded in hi-def over the past five years. If you like classical, rock or pop this is for you.

Right now, the only way to tune into Euro1080 is with one of Quali-TV's approved receivers, with built-in Irdeto encryption. The ZDX-410HD can tune into any of the HDTV formats in use today and you can watch the remarkable pictures on any display with component video inputs, while enjoying Dolby Digital surround sound through your home cinema system from the optical digital audio output.

We've got two ZDX-410HD HDTV satellite receivers to give away, courtesy of Quali-TV, worth around £400 each, and all you have to do to enter a draw to win one is to answer the question below.

If you don't get lucky, you can contact Quali-TV on 0031 (0)182 393 228. You can find out more about Quali-TV at www.quali-tv.com, and discover the latest news on Euro1080 at www.euro1080.tv ■

KEEP IT ANALOGUE

In his February Inside View, Barry Fox asks the question: bring back analogue teletext? Of channels available on Sky Digital sadly very few transmit an analogue teletext service. Although the Sky Guide gives seven-day schedules and it's very easy to set timed recordings from there. I'm sure many people are in the habit of pressing a text button for a straightforward TV guide. On many regular channels, such as Sky's own, Plus and Discovery we are met with a blank screen. Surely a few pages should be broadcast on all channels to give a programme guide?

BBCi, to me, is far too tedious to navigate. For Ceefax, press text, look at page 100 and key in three digits for the page of your choice to shortly appear. The only downside of analogue teletext is that we may enter a reel of pages part-way through the set. That is still preferable to digital text navigation from BBCi. Sky Text has got it right by providing a page number-based service – if only I could turn off the small TV picture.

On occasions, I view the output of my Digibox in another room via an RF lead. Accessing the EPG or digital text is somewhat hampered by a couple of brick walls. Conventional teletext would overcome this as the facility is in the TV, not the box. As the majority of TVs include teletext chips and viewers are familiar wth the concept and operation of teletext services, now would seem to be the time that all channels should provide a teletext service. With a little extra memory in the TV, sub-pages could be stored, giving instant response times and simple navigation.

This would give a far preferable service to any digital one.

We were promised improved graphics on digital text. All I've seen are typed headings for the various sections. There are no photographs either (as mooted). So, TV companies, please bring back analogue teletext!

– BRYAN GREEN, BY E-MAIL

■ Your Digibox suggestion is a little picky when you consider that pressing the info and arrow buttons already gives you access to all the scheduling information you require for pretty much every channel you visit.

Still, we agree that the sheer amount of information available can make BBCi a little daunting to use at times. The BBC has told us it it looking at including number-based navigation for BBC text services, but there's been no sign as yet. As interactive services are often developed in response to comments made by focus groups of potential users, usability often takes precedent over adding fancy graphics or personal photos, although, in the context of your argument, this is surely no bad thing. Any other die-hards out there who prefer analogue to digital text? ■

NOTHING COMES CHEAP

Having renewed my Free-to-View Solus card at £23.50, and this being able to receive Channel 4 and Five again without interference, I've bought a Sky Plus so that my family can time-shift and record FTV programmes easily while maintaining excellent picture quality.

You can imagine my horror when I discovered that the wretched box won't work unless I pay an additional monthly 'Sky Tax', in addition to that required to maintain my TV licence. And it seems I must also subscribe (substantially) to Sky on a monthly fixed-term contract which allows viewings of channels I don't particularly want, simply because my Sky Plus recording ability is locked on to Sky until I sign and pay up.

I pay my taxes and relevant licence fees to HMG and its delegated authorities. If I don't like what they do, I vote accordingly at the polls. I don't remember Sky ever becoming part of the elected UK democracy. This whole thing smacks of 'protection engineering'!

Do Wotsat readers want this practice changed? Surely Ofcom might well wish its interests to be defended, too, as it has recently been given exclusive UK regulatory authority by the government.

Does Sky already have Ofcom in its corporate pocket?

– LUKE DOGWALKER, HAMPSHIRE

■ Sky is a commercial enterprise providing a service that is independent of your TV licence. You get what you're prepared to pay for (Sky Plus is a premium service, remember) and 'justice' doesn't really come into it. Granted, there are issues of monopoly and control involved here, but as Sky is the only digital satellite provider for the UK, regulating against it on this issue seems rather redundant.

MARKING TERRITORY

Your recent articles on viewing cards, official or otherwise, leave me more mystified than ever. I gather that a Frenchman living in London can buy an official TPS card here, but an Englishman living in Paris can't buy a Sky card there. Also, why with Conax-embedded receivers like my Force (and CAMs) readily bought here, is an official card for the Canal Digital transmissions on 1°W not readily sold here? Is the answer that they and Sky show live football? And why have the Danes banned the sale of blank cards, yet programmers and cards are readily on sale here, as your ads show? Aren't we all in the EC?

– KENNETH STIRLAND, BY E-MAIL

■ As you surmise with your remark about football, it's really a question of territory. There is an overseas black market in Sky cards but Sky cards are only issued in the UK because encrypted channels only have the rights to show certain programmes in the British Isles. Similarly, Canal Plus is also bound to honour copyright restrictions and cannot sell its viewing cards overseas. There is no restriction on your right to purchase them, however, once they make it across the channel.

As far as piracy is concerned, regulation of such issues is country-specific. It's illegal to sell pirate viewing cards in the UK but it is not illegal to own, buy or advertise the equipment used in their production.

BRAND LOYALTY

Do you have any idea when Sky is going to get round to letting others make the Sky Plus boxes? All of my equipment is Sony, other than the Pace Sky Plus box that has just replaced a Sony VTX-760U. I would love to have a Sony Sky Plus box.

– ANDY SMITH, VIA E-MAIL

■ The good news is that there will be a Sky box from another manufacturer sometime this year, but it will bear the Amstrad name and not Sony's. Considering that the VTX-760U was Sony's swan-song in the Digibox market, it is unlikely that it will return. If you must have a Sony PVR, maybe you should consider putting an order in for a PSX? ■
